2 Grit MPs Rip B.C. Politicians

OTTAWA (CP)—Two Liberal MPs from British Columbia ridings tore into an unnamed group of west coast politicians Friday, accusing them of being anti-French.

Bruce Howard, parliamentary secretary to Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, and Paul St. Pierre, parliamentary secretary to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, did not identify their targets.

But they obviously included some members of Premier Bennett's Social Credit government.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary) said he had seen the same kind of prejudice in his province as had been evident in Quebec, "where the disease of separatism has been used by some as a vehicle for racism and for personal political gain."

Mr. Howard spoke during second reading of a bill to renew the federal equalization system whereby rich provinces give aid to their poorer neighbors. He said that some B.C. politicians don't seem to be opposed to equalization transfers to other English-speaking provinces.

DIFFERENT ON QUEBEC?

But they did oppose giving any money to Quebec, even though that province received less than almost all the other recipient provinces on a per-capita basis.

The bill received second reading, and will proceed to the Commons finance committee for detailed scrutiny.

Mr. St. Pierre (Coast-Chilcotin) said B.C. politicians have been making "irresponsible statements" aimed at showing that French-speaking Canadians are being favored by the Trudeau government.

He said that a detailed study of facts did not bear this out. Although Quebec had received more regional economic expansion grants than any other province on an absolute basis, on a per-capita basis the province ranked only fourth.

J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) chipped in that some people in British Columbia apparently want to forget that their now-booming province received a big subsidy from Eastern Canada during the last century when taxpayers subsidized the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

PRODUCT OF SYSTEM

Premier Bennett himself had been a product of the equalization system, said Mr. Nowlan.

He had been brought up in New Brunswick and had been educated in a school system partially supported by equalization grants.

Then he had gone west to "do very well for himself."

Equalization payments to the provinces with revenues below those of the donor provinces — Ontario, British Columbia and Alberta— are expected to amount to $1 billion in 1972-73 and about $1.5 billion in 1976-77.

Representatives of the Bennett government have spoken out against the system, and were even threatening a few

DAVIS DEPLORES U.S. LAW BLOCK

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis Friday protested the United States' objections that scuttled the sale of the Pisces IV mini-submarine to the Soviet Union and could block Ottawa's plan to lease it to Russia.

"Certainly an American law should not extend to Canada," Davis said during a visit to the yard of International Hydrodynamics Co. Ltd., designer of the Pisces.

Ottawa cancelled the sale to Russia in december after Washington objected. The federal government then decided to buy the submersible and discussed leasing it, with a Canadian crew, to the Soviet Union.

But Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin told the Commons Thursday that even for a lease arrangement "we must have approval from the U.S.A." because the Pisces contains American components.

Plane Hits House, Kills 17

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — A Mohawk Airlines turboprop, one of its two engines not functioning, crashed into a $50,000 home in a fashionable section of this city during a snowstorm Friday night.

The coroner's office said 17 persons were killed and 36 injured, the plane carried 45 passengers and a crew of three, and there were five persons in the large, white two-storey home.

One of the engines of the FH227 turboprop was out, and the pilot apparently cut the other, knowing he would not make it to Albany airport 3½ miles away. The plane glided into the living room of the house that Joseph Rosen had built 10 years ago.

Rosen, 43, his wife Marcia, 35, and their children, Lawrence, 10 and Roger, 6, were watching The Partridge Family on television when the nose of the plane sliced through their home, caving in the roof and half-knocking the structure over.

Mr. and Mrs. Rosen were flung into the backyard, but survived. Lawrence was found inside the wrecked home, hiding in a closet. Roger also was found in the house, frightened but alive.

Peter Surgent, who lived in an upstairs apartment, was killed. His wife Hanna was not home at the time, police said.

"It was a mess," said Robert Dumas, a fireman from suburban Colonie who was one of the first inside the wreckage. "They cut a hole through the side of the fuselage with a power saw.

"They were all strapped in the seats," Dumas said. "Each seat went forward like dominoes piled on top of each other."

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration at Albany county airport said contact with the plane, Mohawk's Flight 405, was lost when the craft was 3 or 4 miles from the airport — a mile or so after the pilot radioed that he had "feathered" one of the two engines.

A spokesman at Mohawk headquarters in Utica said there was no indication of details of the nature of the emergency aboard the plane.

Sonya Krakower was shaking with terror in the hallway of her home next door, just feet from the shattered living room window where the plane's wing came to rest.

"We grew accustomed to the planes flying over," she said. "We knew we were in the flight path.

"We'd sit outside in the summer and joke about it sometimes. It would really look like they were going to land in the backyard."

Outside, along her driveway, blood stained the fresh snow where a temporary morgue had been set up.

"It finally happened," she said.

CHIANG TO RUN

TAIPEI (UPI) — Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-shek, who last month expressed a desire to retire, will instead accept a draft and run for a fifth term, a Kuomintang party spokesman said today.

A nationwide movement was kicked off to draft Chiang after he announced his intention to step down in an address to the national assembly Feb. 26.

Glue Ban Rejected

Vancouver (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang has rejected a suggestion that the federal government restrict the sale of solvents used by youngsters to obtain hallucinary effects.

In reply to a letter from Vancouver city council on the issue, Lang said preventing the sale of glue, nail polish remover and bay rum to youngsters would not stop them from getting hold of the items.

"To strictly restrict their sale could be considered an injustice to the great majority of young people who use them properly in many of their day-to-day activities," the minister's reply says.

"Such prohibitions would have to be so extensive they would seriously affect the rights of the great majority of people who do not abuse the substances," said Lang.

The minister's reply will come before city council Tuesday.

'Loffmark Hid In Slander'

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark was accused Friday of slandering a sick woman who needed heart surgery to cover up his own ineptness in planning medical facilities in B.C.

Barrie Clark (L — North Vancouver-Seymour) told the legislature Loffmark also may have damaged the ability of Mrs. Norma Rankin of Sparks, Nevada, to recover from the open heart surgery she received in Vancouver last December.

The minister discussed Mrs. Rankin's case in the legislature in February and said doctors have too much power in deciding who gets admitted to hospitals.

FRAUD IMPRESSION

Many MLAs felt at the time Loffmark left the impression Mrs. Rankin attempted to defraud the B.C. Medical Plan and the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service, though she paid her hospital bill.

Loffmark said in his budget debate speech he did not intend to recommend that any charges be laid. But he pointed out Mrs. Rankin, an American resident, underwent surgery at a time when a Surrey man, Russell McKinnon, was flown to Montreal at provincial expense for open heart surgery.

"His behavior has been an attempt to cover up his own ineptness by slandering someone who doesn't have the right to speak in this house. The minister's statements have put her to a severe test as far as her recovery is concerned."

SYSTEM WEAK

Loffmark said he brought Mrs. Rankin's case before the house to point out the weaknesses in the system of accrediting doctors for hospital privileges.

"I never suggested there was any culpable action on

Slides Claim Lives

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (UPI) — A pounding rainstorm which caused rivers to flood and tumbled rock and mud slides onto highways has claimed the lives of at least 10 persons in southern Oregon and northern California.

The heavy rains drenched the area for six days, but the weatherman forecast the showers would taper off today to give soaked residents a break from the storm.

Tons of rock and boulders crashed onto roadways wet with pouring rain and closed long stretches of the main north-south coastal highway. Some motorists met death under the cascading slides.

Rivers were near or above flood stage because of the heavy rains and melting snow. Waterfront businesses sand-bagged their buildings against the onrushing water.

Two small planes crashed in the storm. The pilot of one was killed, the other pilot survived. Two youths were electrocuted by downed power lines.

NEWS BRIEFS

Oil Deal Set?

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese finance minister was reported today to have decided on a $1-billion loan to help finance a Soviet-Japanese project to develop oil fields in Siberia.

Assassinated

BEIRUT (AP) — A former Syrian vice-premier and interior minister, Maj.-Gen. Mohammed Omran, was assassinated today in his house in the northern Lebanese city of Tripoli, police reported.

Citizens Flee

TUZIA, Yugoslavia (AP) — About 100,000 persons fled their homes Friday night when two medium-strength earthquakes shook the industrial zone of central Yukoslavia, reports said today.

Narrow Squeeze

EDMONTON (CP) — Western region airport technicians voted by a slim margin Friday to accept a settlement offer worked out by a federal mediator. A spokesman said 54.3 per cent of the 180 technicians in the region, which includes Alberta, northeastern British Columbia, the Yukon and part of the Northwest Territories voted in favor of the proposal.

Bullring First

MADRID (UPI) — Spanish labor unrest spread to the bullring today when matadors threatened to strike unless the government cuts their taxes. There are 1,559 bullfighters registered in Spain, including 184 foreigners. If the strike materialized, it would be the first in Spanish bullfighting history.

Blast Kills 4 In Belfast Cafe

BELFAST (UPI) — A bomb exploded in a downtown Belfast restaurant crowded with shoppers having their afternoon tea today, killing at least four persons and injuring as many as 60, a British army spokesman said.

The spokesman said at least 10 of those injured in the 4:30 p.m. blast at the Abercorn Restaurant were in serious condition.

The explosion hurled glass over passersby on Castle Street in the heart of the capital's shopping district.

The spokesman said the bomb was relatively small and probably contained no more than 10 pounds of explosive. He said the toll was particularly high because it apparently went off without warning in the confined space of the restaurant.

Earlier today police surprised two gunmen planting a bomb outside a Belfast office and, in a gunbattle, shot and killed one and seriously wounded the other, a police spokesman said.

Near Londonderry, police said they found in the snow along a country road the hooded body of a man shot twice through the head.

The man aged about 30, was not identified immediately, but hooding and executing victims is a method which has been used by the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

EX-CON WINS SUIT

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—A former convict has won a $600,000 judgment for blindness he says was caused by tear-gas used during a prison disturbance.

A federal jury made the award to Artie Curtis Ussery, 27, against the Federal Laboratory Co. of Saltzeberg, Pa.

Ussery said a blast of tear-gas from a prison guard led to total blindness.

Hovercraft Flips

PORTSMOUTH, England (UPI) — A passenger-carrying hovercraft flipped over in gale-force winds near this port today, spilling several dozen persons into the icy English Channel, coast guard officials said.

A spokesman for the Isle of Wight coast guard said 26 passengers were believed to have been aboard the hovercraft and that 15 had been picked up by boats and a Royal Air Force helicopter.

Several other passengers and the pilot were trapped in the craft, the coast guard said.

Rescue boats from Portsmouth and Cowes on the Isle of Wight sped to the scene of the accident near Clarence Pier at Southsea.

Witnesses said a rush of air lifted an edge of the craft, which makes regular trips in the Solent, a channel between Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight, and flipped it over into the water.

DRAMA TEST CAUSES BUZZ

It's that time of year and once again many local schools are abuzz with preparations for the annual Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival.

Now in its 32nd year, the festival opens next Friday at Lansdowne Junior Secondary. Times drama critic Audrey Johnson checked out the activities with a photographer at a number of schools.

What they found appears today on Page 12.

Dollars Poor Yardsticks to Compare Regions

OTTAWA (CP) — Strategies for regional development must go beyond purely economic values and include subjective social values, a regional development conference was told today.

Economic indicators such as per capita income are an insufficient foundation for regional development policies, said Dr. O. J. Firestone, organizer of the three-day conference which ended today.

"Dollar figures do not reflect adequately how people feel and what they really want." Some groups, for example, might prefer leisure activities to earning overtime pay.

Measured in terms of personal income per capita, regional economic disparity changed little between the mid-1920's and the mid-1960's, he said. But social disparity lessened as the poorer regions came closer to the rich ones in terms of infant mortality rates, health services, book circulation, number of telephones and television sets, and newspaper circulation.

Some social indicators, notably the student-teacher ratio, showed more of a gap in 1969 than in 1959, but overall social disparity lessened.

DATA QUESTIONED

Dr. Firestone, an economics professor at the University of Ottawa, concluded that "regional economic disparity data and analysis do not necessarily provide a useful basis for regional economic planning and policy formulation."

"A more meaningful way may be the setting of regional targets aimed at maximizing the resources of each area, taking into account the aspirations and the will of its residents."

J. P. Francis, assistant deputy minister for planning in the federal department of regional economic expansion, agreed that planners must take social values into account.

"At the forefront of any debate over policies to achieve a greater regional balance in economic opportunities must be the difficulty in quantifying the net social benefits flowing from different strategies," he said.

"Psychic income associated with family ties and hereditary domiciles, for example, is highly subjective and people and groups with particular ideologies give it especial weight."

ADVISE CAUTION

Mr. Francis cautioned against expecting too much from planning or trying to draw up rigid, all-encompassing, long-term development programs.

"The movement towards a more rational decision-making process in regional development, as in many other fields of importance to society, is going to be difficult and long. The will, the tools and the information are still in a rudimentary state."

If a wrong approach to planning produces a more rigid and less responsive decision-making process, he said, the words of Danish poet Piet Hien might apply:

"Our choicest plans have fallen through,
Our airiest castles tumbled over,
Because of the lines we neatly drew,
And later neatly stumbled over."

OVE WITT MAY SEEK SC SEAT

Victoria alderman Ove Witt said today he is "very strongly considering" going after the Social Credit nomination for one of the two Victoria seats in the legislature.

The seats are held by Trade Minister Waldo Skillings and Public Works Minister W. N. Chant.

Witt said he has been approached by Social Credit party organizers to seek the nomination before the next provincial election, expected later this year.

"I really would like to," Witt said.

He said once he has decided to seek the nomination, he will take out a membership in the Socred party. He said he hadn't really given much consideration to the three other political parties in B.C.

Local Backing Lacking

A further amendment to the Public Schools Act, which will mean an automatic referendum for any school district wishing to spend more than the provincially-set limit, does not have the support of Greater Victoria school board chairman Allan McKinnon.

McKinnon said Friday he does not approve of the amendment because it means a school board will have to take a spending issue to the public even if it is sure taxpayers would not object to spending above the provincial limit.

Present legislation stipulates that 100 taxpayers, or five per cent of the taxpeyers, must object in writing to the extra spending before the issue goes to a vote. The situation exists now in Greater Victoria, with a referendum to be held next Saturday for $412,000 above the spending limit.

WASTE

The amendment was introduced in the legislature earlier this week by Education Minister Donald Brothers.

The amendment was called "a needless waste of taxpayers' time and money" by B.C. School Trustees' Association president Jack Smedley, who said that of 25 school districts seeking to spend above the provincial limit, only nine had the necessary number of taxpayers objecting to the expenditure, forcing a referendum.

With the new legislation, the other 16 districts would also have to hold referendums, which cost money themselves, he said.

RUNAWAY LOCOMOTIVE STOPPED BY RUNNER

LONDON (UPI) — When the engineer of locomotive 5521 returned to where he had left it in the freight yard, the big diesel was gone.

The 100-ton locomotive, whose brakes apparently had not been set, rolled quietly out of Harrogate freight yard in northern England Friday.

Gathering speed, the runaway engine careened along a downhill stretch of track through the English countryside.

Frantic railway officials telephoned warnings to stations along the way.

The locomotive raced on, reaching speeds of 60 miles per hour as it crashed through the wooden gates of one railway crossing.

On it sped. Commuters at five stations gaped as the driverless engine whizzed by.

At the disused station of Marston Moor, 12 miles down the track from the freight yard, signalman Kenneth Bristow, 43, braced for action.

The locomotive, now slowed to 20 m.p.h. by an uphill stretch, approached the station's platform. Bristow started running.

"I was pelting alongside the cab door which was slightly open," Bristow said later. "I grabbed hold of a handle, got a foothold and swung myself aboard.

"I had never been in an engine cab before," he said. "There were a lot of dials and levers. There was a catch saying 'emergency brake on,' so I pulled it and gradually the thing stopped."

. . . LOFFMARK RAPPED

the part of this woman," he said.

"But that's the impression you left at the time," Clark shot back.

Later in the debate Clark rose again to say he had telephoned Mrs. Rankin to clarify some information and had learned that he was misinformed about her citizenship now.

She is in fact an American citizen, he said.

But he said Mrs. Rankin told him that she had brought the cash with her to pay for her operation in advance when she came to British Columbia.

"Obviously there was no intention to defraud," he said.

Clark also stated that Mrs. Rankin's husband was resident in B.C. from January 1971, and had applied, properly, for a medicare card and received one for himself and for his wife, which he hadn't applied for.

He said Loffmark's speech "was the most unfair act by a cabinet minister this session," and he added the minister implied she came to B.C. for her operation because she could not afford it in the U.S.

Clark said Mrs. Rankin's doctor told her last summer she needed another operation and gave his professional advice that the Vancouver surgeon who had done her previous operations perform the fourth one.

The Liberal MLA said he is advised that Mrs. Rankin was told by the B.C. Medical Plan she was eligible for coverage.

If there was any attempt to misrepresent the truth in her application, Clark said — and he added he did not believe there was — Loffmark should recommend charges be laid on the basis of facts.

Otherwise, he said, everybody has to believe Mrs. Rankin is innocent of any wrongdoing. But the result of Loffmark's speech, Clark said, has been anonymous letters to the woman and the damaging of her reputation in B.C. and Nevada.

'DROP DEAD'

Clark read part of one letter he said Mrs. Rankin had received following Loffmark's speech in which the writer said he hoped she died soon.

The letter was signed "drop dead," Clark said.

Mrs. Rankin's husband has threatened to sue Loffmark if he ever repeats outside the legislature what he said about his wife inside it, Clark said.

He challenged the minister to go outside the house and repeat his statements.

"The least this minister can do is publicly apologize to this woman who he pilloried. That woman is innocent unless the minister has facts to prove she's guilty and if he has facts he should lay charges."

RID OF B.C.

Clark said that in the light of Mrs. Rankin's wish to be "rid of British Columbia" and the memories of her treatment by Loffmark he would no longer raise the issue.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said he regretted Loffmark had brought "petty parochialism" into the issue of health services.

AT 100, STILL HUNTS FOR GOLD

ATLIN, B.C. (CP) — Dick Craft gave up riding his bicycle at 98.

At his 100th birthday party Friday night, he announced he has just taken out a five-year renewal of his driver's licence.

And as soon as the weather clears up in the remote mining community in the northwest corner of British Columbia, he says he'll be out in his old pickup truck again, hunting for gold.

A heavy-set man, Craft hasn't lost his sense of humor over the years.

Asked if his teeth were real, he replied:

"I couldn't find any in the second-hand store, so I haven't bought any yet."

He lives alone in a small log cabin in the middle of town. His wife, whom he met when he was police chief in Timmins, Ont. in the early 1900s, died in 1952.

To keep himself busy, Craft converted his front porch into a small variety store 12 years ago. He spends most of the day dishing out candy and soda pop to passing children.

"I don't make any money at it," he explained. "In fact, I guess you could say I lost on it, but it gives me something to do."

Time's Ad Queried

School Curbs Bring Battle of Graphs

The current issue of Time Magazine containing advertisements for liquor, cigarettes and Premier Bennett's budget speech was brandished in the legislature Friday by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

Barrett asked whether this apparent switch of policy toward publications that violate provincial advertising bans was in fact a decision to "reward" Evergreen Press which publishes Time in B.C.

He noted the company has been considered close to the Social Credit government in the past.

Barrett was interrupted by supply committee chairman Herb Bruch who said the advertising ban was not under Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's estimates which were under debate Friday.

Barrett said he wanted to know if Loffmark approved of the budget advertisement in Time Magazine.

Neither Loffmark nor Premier Bennett made any comment.

The ad, said Liberal Leader Pat McGeer, "shows the absurb double standard we have sunk to in B.C.

"The attorneey-general says he refuses to reward the Victoria Colonist and Victoria Times because they broke the tobacco ad ban, but he will reward Time Magazine by placing a national ad for B.C.'s budget."

What can only be called "The Battle of the Graphs" has sprung out of the current struggle between B.C. school boards and the provincial government over spending limits.

The opening shot in the graph war was fired by the government and today the fire was returned by the newly-organized School District 61 (Greater Victoria) Parents Association.

The parents' group which organized in opposition to the government's proposed limits on school board spending and teachers' salaries, has drawn up a graph which shows that, according to spending figures extended from 1960 into the future, the government's contribution to elementary and secondary school education will in the year 1990 be a mere two per cent of the total provincial budget.

GOVERNMENT GRAPH

The graph was drawn up after the parents' group received from Education Minister Donald Brothers a government graph drawn up much the same way.

The government graph appears to show that, according to spending figures extended from 1960 into the future, the share of the budget taken up by education, health and social services will by the year 1980 take up the entire provincial budget.

Parents Association spokesman Dr. George Stocker said the parents' graph is, of course, an extension of "farcical reasoning."

"We know it doesn't work," he said, "But it is still the same type of graph as they have produced."

WELCOME IT

"Using the Honorable Minister's own methods we have arrived at the conclusion that elementary and secondary education will only cost the provincial government two per cent of its budget by 1990," Stocker said. "We have been given to believe that Mr. Brothers would welcome this state of affairs."

The parents' graph shows spending on lower education declining from a 1960 "high" of about 23 per cent of the total budget to a 1972 figure of about 19 per cent.

From there, the graph takes a sharper downward slope, taking into account proposed government cutbacks on school board spending.

ZERO IN 1994

The graph shows lower education spending to take up 12 per cent of the total budget in 1980 and less than eight per cent in 1985. By the year 1994, the government would be contributing nothing at all toward lower education spending.

The government graph has bold letters emblazoned across the top of the page: Can We Let This Happen! It projects total government revenues increasing by 10 per cent per year and spending on education, health and social services increasing at 15 per cent per year.

The two lines intersect at about 1980, with the total expenditure (all going to education, health and social services, of course) amounting to about $2.8 billion.

This year, the total budget is estimated at $1.5 billion, with estimated spending on elementary and secondary education about $286 million. This figure represents about 19 per cent of the total budget, as the parents' graph shows.

However, the government graph includes post-secondary education spending as well as health and social services in its projection of costs.

Education costs, including post-secondary, take up 31 per cent of the total budget and health and social services take up a further 38 per cent of the total, according to figures in Premier Bennett's budget speech. These chunks are both increased by 15 per cent per year to get to the 1980 intersecting line.

Stocker said the government graph is rendered even more inaccurate by including the costs for health and social services. It is the necessity for spending a proper proportion of total revenue on lower education his parents' group is pushing.

"When some of the people in our group who are familiar with accounting saw their graph, they just shook their heads," Stocker said.

weeks ago to test its constitutionality in court.

The question of the court challenge arise shortly after Prime Minister Trudeau called Mr. Bennett a bigot who thought there were too many French-Canadians in Ottawa.

SAYS IT'S A LAUGH

Mr. Howard said the question of the court challenge has disappeared "in the laughter of constitutional experts."

"If politicians in British Columbia oppose equalization grants only, then why do they always use Quebec as an illustration? . . ." he asked.

"After all, Quebec with grants of $74 per capita is the second lowest of all the receiving provinces.

"If there is any complaint why not talk about Newfoundland, with $213 per capita, or New Brunswick . . . with $164 per cipta?"

Mr. Howard said he could only assume that these politicians thought that it was wrong to have equalization grants for French-speaking provinces but it was all right for English-speaking provinces.

CALLED 'UNFAIR'

Mr. St. Pierre called the accusations that Quebec is getting more than its fair share "divisive, unfair, damaging."

Quebec's per-capita share of regional expansion grants was $14.93, compared to $32.60 for Nova Scotia, $29.78 for New Brunswick, and $16.40 for the comparatively wealthy province of Alberta.

Other per-capita regional expansion figures mentioned by Mr. St. Pierre: Newfoundland $12.54, Manitoba $12. Prince Edward Island $10.25, Saskatchewan $5.87, Ontario $2.75 and British Columbia $1.45.

The Commons will face another controversial bill Monday — the annual legislation to provide funds for the operation of Canadian National Railways, which always raises scores of complaints about transportation policies.

Queen's Appeal Astounds

SINGAPORE (Reuter) — Queen Elizabeth is halfway through a swing round Southeast Asia and the Indian Ocean proving that a queen can pull in as big a crowd as a pop singer or a film star.

The Queen's crowd-drawing power has astounded the independent governments of her former colonies. Time and again they have found their arrangements inadequate to deal with the mass appeal she has evoked.

Businesses find their office girls taking sick leave, Chinese servants have urgent domestic problems and government employees ask for their remaining leave.

The Queen, at 45 the world's most-travelled monarch, takes it in her stride whether a tropical storm lashes the welcoming reception or a fierce sun has guardsmen fainting and officials perspiring. If the state car is late she makes small conversation to put harassed dignitaries at ease.

Despite the time spent in planning the meticulous details of a royal tour, things do go awry.

During the first leg of her 46-day tour, in Thailand, the yellow royal limousine broke down on the outskirts of Bangkok just past midnight, with the Queen and Prince Philip in full evening dress.

Unperturbed and watched by a crowd of about 50 Thai shopowners, they stood in regal splendor in the road to hitch a lift from the next vehicle passing. It happened to be that of Princess Anne.

Car problems struck again during the tour of Singapore, when the Queen was lent a Rolls-Royce by millionaire Chinese film magnate Runme Shaw. The economy-minded government of Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew decided it had no official car sufficiently opulent for the royal visitors.

Excited Chinese crowds at a housing development pushed past an inadequate police cordon and the driver was forced to take a corner sharply, making an expensive dent in the fender and door where the Queen was seated.

The Queen and driver had a short conversation and the car proceeded. At their destination the door would not open so the Quen was forced to slide across the seat. The crowds loved the little drama.

There were no bumps when the Queen visited the oil-rich Moslem sultanate of Brunei.

RODE VAST CHARIOT

Here the Queen was borne into town on what must be the strangest vehicle of her tour — a vast chariot built on a 10-ton truck chassis and pulled by 48 sweating soldiers in traditional Malay dress, with black and silver head scarves.

But at the state reception house, the chariot's steps could not be lowered until Prince Philip resorted to an unscientific method. He kicked them — and they worked.

During the visit to Sarawak, a royal barge manned by colorful parsmen was nearly swept down-river by the strong current.

Tragedy nearly struck when the Queen's flotilla created such a wash that five canoes, each manned by 20 men, were swamped. One non-swimmer was hauled aboard a press launch and given resuscitation to bring him round. He recovered later in hospital.

The biggest headaches for security men have been the meet-the-people sessions when the Queen strolls along local streets.

In Singapore's Pagoda Street, the crowds were massive and pressed round the Royal Family, who remained completely at their ease and appeared to be enjoying themselves.

At a mosque in the Malaysian capital of Kuala Lumpur, crowd control failed when the police escort could not get their boots off as quickly as the Quen shed her shoes.

She walked about in her stockinged feet, virtually jostled by eager Moslems and even by Malay Chinese who would not normally enter a mosque.

The most hardened observers of royal tours have noted Queen Elizabeth's poise in all circumstances.

In a Thailand leper colony she showed the right touch of concern and sympathy, at a remedial training centre in Sabah she appeared fascinated by a light-switch made by one of the boys, and in the evenings aboard the royal yacht Britannia she ritually shakes hundreds of hands with a word and smile.

Humor has not been lacking from the tour. There was a monkey that failed to climb a tree to get her a coconut, a royal Thai elephant that sat on a police car, and at one point an impromptu presentation to the Queen of a pot of plastic flowers.

PAY TO BE FREE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Wildlife Federation's decision to oppose in the courts the proposed trans-Alaska oil pipeline may threaten the funds it receives from industry, the federation's annual meeting was told Friday.

Jack O'Dette of Kingston, Ont., president of the federation, said participation in U.S. proceedings asking for an injunction against the pipeline led provincial directors to tell him the action "might annoy industry, inasmuch as we had indirectly taken big industry on."

"This gave me the opportunity to very forcibly point out the necessity of paying our own way if we wished to be free to take whatever action we deemed necessary in the interests of all Canadians," said Mr. O'Dette.

"Your reaction was very favorable and we are now pretty well committed to looking after ourselves financially," he told delegates.

NOTICE OF ANNUAL MEETING

COMMUNITY CHEST

OF GREATER VICTORIA

The Annual Meeting of the Community Chest of Greater Victoria will be held on Wednesday, March 15, 1972 at 7 P.M. in the Old Forge, Strathcona Hotel, 919 Douglas Street.

Business will include the election of Officers and Directors and the presentation of Annual Reports of Standing Committees.

Any individual over the age of 18 years, or an incorporated company, having contributed not less than one dollar to the 1971-72 United Appeal, qualifies for membership in the Community Chest and is entitled to be present and vote at the Annual Meeting.

Does the fact that we're guaranteed twice as long, mean that we're twice as good?

We can't prove it, but one thing's sure: we're twice as confident.

Our warranty lasts for two years or 24,000 miles. Whichever comes first.*

Anybody else's warranty (with the notable exception of Rolls-Royce) is good for only 12 months or 12,000 miles.

How can we do it?

We're the only ones who have stuck with one car model for 24 years. Time enough to improve and refine it over 2,200 times. (29 improvements on our '72 model alone.)

We pay a legion of inspectors to make sure nothing leaves our hands that shouldn't leave our hands.

And we're the only car makers with VW-Diagnosis, an advanced electronic system that protects our cars even after they leave our hands.

So while a Volkswagen may not be the lowest-priced economy car you can buy, once you check into what you get for what you pay, you'll find very few car companies who, in reality, end up with their prices lower.

And none who start out with their standards higher.

*All of the terms of this warranty are clearly defined in the owner's manual and will be explained by any authorized Volkswagen dealer in Canada. Based on known sources.

Warning Signs of the Future

Gratification at the continuing increase in Canada's Gross National Product — the total value of goods and services produced in the country — in 1971, has to be tempered by the knowledge that a basic change in the economy is becoming apparent, with future significance that is far from being understood. In short, we face the paradox that we are producing more in the midst of greater unemployment, even while selling more of the product at home.

The GNP in 1971, according to federal statistics released yesterday, was $92.1 billions — a 9.1 per cent increase over the previous year's $84.4 billions. Of course, some of this dollar increase is attributable to the inflated currency — the real growth in productivity amounted to only 5.4 per cent over the previous year.

The odd fact is that whereas in 1970 foreign trade provided the chief stimulus to production, the main increase in 1971 came from Canadian consumers. This may account in part for the fact that the upsurge in productivity was maintained with unusuul regularity throughout the year, running at about 1.5 per cent in each quarter.

The domestic demand for goods was continued despite the serious unemployment level — a reminder that even though unemployment figures were high in 1971 — at a seasonally adjusted rate of more than 6 per cent — employment figures increase each year too. The 2.5 per cent rate of increase in persons employed in 1971 was nearly twice the increase shown in 1971. But the full effect of this was obscured by the overall increase of 3.1 per cent in the size of the labor force.

More clearly each year we are entering on the era when the unemployed segment of the population will become proportionally much greater. Higher productivity of the people employed, due to automation, advanced skills, streamlined processes and other developments, will mean that fewer man-hours per year, in proportion to the size of the nation, will be required to supply the domestic and export market.

Make-work projects, trivial government-financed job-producers which are designed more to distribute money on an emergency basis than to produce anything necessary or of lasting value, are not the answer to the basic problem. Government, industry and labor should be giving more attention to the fundamental change which is beginning to face us even though immediate unemployment presents a question which must also be answered. A wholly new approach will have to be made to a wholly new social and economic problem, and planning should not be left until critical emergencies force panicky action.

Shades of the Old Apple Tree

The British Columbia Teachers' Federation, says its president, Mr. Adam Robertson, is not a political organization. But Mr. Robertson, as an individual, has decided to "take a strong personal stand against the government this time. The government must change its policies—display a reasonable degree of fair play and respect toward teachers and show some concern for the quality of education. Otherwise I will do everything in my power to bring about its defeat at the next election."

The BCTF president has every right to take whatever legal action he wishes as a citizen and an adherent of the political party of his choice. He must recognize, however, that as president of the BCTF his publicized intent cannot be divorced entirely from the organization he heads.

When he declares his intention of working for the defeat of a particular party in power, his stand is automatically identified with his federation. Without defining the party to which he gives allegiance, he is very definitely anti-Socred.

This, it will be remembered, was the position in which the BCTF placed itself in the relatively recent past when it promulgated its Big Apple campaign against the government.

That campaign was a failure, though it did bring what the teachers consider to be reprisals against their federation. Mr. Robertson has declared war. It would be unusual if the "enemy" acted in any other way than as the "enemy".

The federation appears launched along the road it followed so recently without success. Shades of the Old Apple Tree.

Slick Ice

Following the latest Russian hockey triumph at the Sapporo Winter Olympics, United States coach Murray Williamson paid a glowing tribute to the man he credits not only with coaching the winners, but in fathering modern hockey in the Soviet Union — Anatoly Tarasov.

"He's a genius," said Williamson, "A coaching genius like Vince Lombardi. He has developed special training methods and exercises to increase puck handling skill and balance. And he has the unique personality needed for his job. No other human being could keep those athletes happy and playing well for such a long time each year. And he always brings them to a peak just at the right time."

The opinion was published February 19. Six days later the presidium of the Soviet Hockey Federation announced that Tarasov had been dismissed, Anatoly Tarasov spent time in Canada studying the techniques of major leaguers and adapting them to Russian teams that have achieved outstanding success. The Soviet hockey presidium seemed to have reversed the usual North American axiom by firing the winning coach. But did it? Last year the Montreal Canadiens won the Stanley Cup — and fired their coach. Perhaps, like Anatoly, the presidium is learning from the Canadiens, though nobody can be quite sure what. That's the old riddle wrapped in the older enigma.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Shudder

Once again our Prime Minister has shown his contempt for English-speaking Canada. In his Throne Speech he stated that more aid will be given to the needy and those with large families. Where do we find the majority of large families? In Quebec of course. This is another way of our present government funnelling more financial help to his pet province, Quebec.

Every bill introduced by the government that deals with giving away money is done so with Quebec in mind. Take the family allowance for instance, where do you find the greatest percentage of large families? Quebec. Take another one, Welfare. How about Unemployment Insurance? The people of Quebec can raise families faster than jobs can be found, so who benefits? Quebec.

Take Winter Works and Opportunities For Youth. Who do you think got the lion's share of those two? Quebec. All these programs were brought forth with but one thought in mind: Pave the streets of Quebec with gold at the expense of the rest of Canada.

As it now stands, Quebec is a millstone around the necks of the rest of Canada, and most of it has been brought about by Trudeau, Marchand and Pelletier. At the rate that this government is going, should the people of this country elect them to another term, it wouldn't surprise me if French isn't the official language.

We have had French Canadian Prime Ministers before but we have never been in the spot that we are in now, since Trudeau became Prime Minister. When one compares the appearance of the leader of this country to the leader of the U.S.A. there is little doubt that the rest of the world has some thoughts of their own, and I shudder to think what they must be. — F. M. Pennie, 5366 Alderley Rd.

Megavitamins

Re your report of U.B.C. mental health expert, Doctor Konrad Schwartz's opinion on the group of local people advocating vitamins for the treatment of mental illness in the belief that metabolism plays a part in some types of diseases diagnosed as schizophrenia. (Times, Feb. 23.)

It is meaningless of Doctor Schwartz to say that he is not convinced of the efficacy of megavitamin therapy unless he also presents us his criteria for proof. There are numerous cases in Victoria, and elsewhere, of hopelessly ill people, incapacitated for years, being able to return to work after a few days of the proper vitamin therapy.

One egregious example was related by Doctor Hoffer on a C.B.C. interview last autumn. If this does not convince Doctor Schwartz that there is merit in the treatment, then it is your responsibility as a news agency to find out what does, before you print his opinions.

If you refer to Maclean's, you will find that the metabolic factors of schizophrenia were studied twenty years ago, and vitamins have been used as standard treatment in Saskatchewan mental hospitals for ten years with a success rate, according to Doctor Hoffer, exceeding 75 per cent in the specific metabolic malfunctions.

If Doctor Schwartz is so concerned about the long-term effects of megavitamin therapy (isn't twenty years long enough?) how does he feel about the long-term effects of schizophrenia? What is his opinion on electri-convulsive shock therapy? Has he gone on record to question the long-term effects of the pill? How long did he wait before he thought it was safe to prescribe tranquilizers and other mood-changing drugs to his own patients? What has he done to oppose the world-wide application of DDT just as soon as it was invented? Will he warn us about the possible effects on humans from the biochemical stimulation of food animals? Why did not your reporter ask him about the long-term effects of pre-frontal lobotomy?

Alexander Fleming discovered penicillin in 1929. It was doctors like Schwartz who kept antibiotics from the public for nearly fifteen years, till the end of the Second World War. My own life was saved by the very first shipment of streptomycin to be received by the hospital in useful dosages, and my mother died after screaming for hours in the most indescribable pain from the same infection merely a few years earlier, so I have more than a casual interest in professional obscurantism.

Because of the great pressure in publishing a daily newspaper, it is acknowledged by anyone who is capable of judging that reports cannot be checked for accuracy; you have to rely on the probity of your information. But when you publish a report which anyone with professional experience can see to be deliberately misleading, you are culpably guilty of contributing to the agony of millions of people who are fated to suffer needlessly because of the same kind of medical obstructionism that withheld antisepsis, psychotherapy, and anesthesia. — T. B. Pawlicki, 843 Fort St.

Sorrow Expressed

On behalf of the Croatian community of Victoria, we wish to express our deepest shock and sorrow over the death of our former Mayor, J. Courtney Haddock.

By his sudden death we have lost a great civic leader and one of the best friends of the Croatian-Canadians of Victoria.

Quilt Case

In referring to the Fred Quilt tragedy, Larry Seymore has hit at the heart of the complete lack of justice in the relations between whites and Indians in North America during the last four centuries. With his pithy statement that Indian witnesses who testified in the Quilt case should be taken more seriously, he has placed in a nutshell the valid lack of faith which his people share in white-administered justice.

Though times may change, certain facets of our attitudes, unfortunately, too often remain static through many years, or even centuries. Another tragedy, from the buffalo-hunting times (1873) well illustrates this fact. Four members of an Indian group, on the doubtful grounds that they had stolen a horse, were killed in a brush with a posse of whites. As a result of a furore raised by their tribe, an investigation was held by what was (of course) an all-white commission, which resulted in the complete exoneration of the posse members. Although even casual research casts very grave doubt upon the guilt of the Indians or the innocence of the whites, the chairman of the commission defended their decision with the contention that the "sworn testimony" of the whites should be accepted, rather than the story told by the Indians, as their "proverbial disregard of truth" made it "of little value".

Is this what is being done in the Fred Quilt case? Must we again wait ninety-nine long years for the full truth to come to light? — James C. Murphy, 10025 Resthaven Dr.

Tragic Situation

Your editorials on the troubles in Ireland are most certainly one-sided.

European news media have described the actions of British troops as a "massacre." The British government refused the assistance and modifying offers of the United Nations.

While there is fault on both sides, there is sufficient evidence to indicate the British forces are acting in a manner which they have bitterly criticized in other nations in the past.

Whichever side one professes to believe it is the responsibility of the news media to report fully and as accurately as possible, a situation as tragic and explosive as present-day Ireland.

Surely the opinions of the leading Irish newspapers would merit space in your newspaper, and would offer more tangible evidence of the extent of the troubles, and also the feelings of a good majority of the English people as well as the Irish, towards Prime Minister Heath whose misjudgment has intensified the tragedy.

Do you really think all those major strikes in the U.K. signify affection towards the establishment? — John Gaul, 1276 Rudlin.

ART STOTT

'They' Are to Blame

You walked by the stout wire fence on Cranmore Road, ignoring the lunch papers, candy wrappers and empty cigarette packages wind-driven into its base. Gales and rain squalls had slashed the area the preceding two days and the litter might have escaped containers into which it might have been placed. Then you turned in to Oak Bay Senior Secondary for a brief visit to Ecologue '72.

The young people had organized a teach-in on the environmental-pollution issue. Their preparations were painstaking. The themes ranged over a variety of topical subjects within the main framework: air pollution, forests and parks, pesticides and wildlife, politics of pollution, population and resources, power generation and use, transportation, urban and suburban planning, water pollution, waste disposal and litter, resource management.

I sat for over an hour at the back of a room crowded by students listening to a panel discuss forests and parks. The students flattered their speakers with as intense a concentration as I have encountered. Probably more than their elders, they seemed involved.

Informed and Concerned

The panel contained trained professionals who knew their specialties. It also contained others deeper in concern than in knowledge of ecological and pollution problems and feasible remedies.

In an admirable soft sell, a forester from a major provincial commercial concern advocated multiple use of forest lands. He avoided the crudity of pointing out that if British Columbians wanted to slice provincial income in half, not another tree need be cut for market. Rather, he suggested the economic importance of the industry and the efforts of his firm to assist in preserving recreational and other resource values in various parts of non-park wilderness — each locality being assigned a particular purpose.

Other speakers addressed themselves more directly to preservation of the wilderness and parks of various types, saw their need in a future of more congested population, and fought the verbal fight against the despoilers. The tone was temperate, even on such matters as the Nitinat Triangle. The argument was as frequently speculative as realistic, but it reflected devotion to the principle that this generation has a responsibility to posterity to protect the amenities those yet unborn should enjoy. Coupled with that was the feeling that if conservation and preservation are not more effectively enforced, those amenities will disappear, to the detriment of humanity. I watched the young people more closely than I did the elders. They were taking it all in, though a brief question period disclosed their attitudes to be more idealistic than practical — as it certainly should be in youth.

Scenery or sales?

I came away with one impressive piece of advice given by more than one speaker. The advice counselled the young people to go out and see for themselves what was happening in the wilderness. Statistics, it was pointed out, could be used in different ways to support opposing cases. Evidence seen on the ground, they were told, could be more reliable.

I left, also, with the melancholy conviction that any group championing the cause of conservation is chiefly concerned with what other interests are doing to the environment. For the young people, no less than their elders, it is extremely difficult to realize that pollution and ecological damage is caused by people in general. Too many nature lovers treading the volcanic soil of a flower-studded alpine meadow can wear it out. So, as a naturalist pointed out, can too many people invading the Nitinat Triangle, Bowron Lakes, or any other park, wear down the balance that gives to each its particular appeal.

Fouling the Air

Outside, I walked by the same fence with papers plastered to its mesh, past dozens of automobiles, driven there by people attending Ecologue '72. Had they been totally committed to clean air, they might have walked, or ridden bikes to the teach-in. That would have made it easier, also, for me to find a parking place closer to the school.

As in so many other human concerns, in the present direction of ecological-pollution trends, human beings seem to want to have their cake and eat it, too. People want other people — meaning big operators for the most part in the current debate — to mend their ways and save people from the evils of a poisoned and despoiled natural world. We don't have to ask for whom the bell tolls. We know. But it's too uncomfortable to recognize our own hand on the bell pull. After all, most of us don't cut down the virgin forest or build the polluting cars. We just earn a living from or use the products of those who cut down the trees and we only drive the cars.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

FREEMAN KING

The recent high winds have caused a lot of damage not only to buildings but to the forests.

No doubt the largest number of trees uprooted and blown down have been Douglas firs. This is because this tree has very shallow roots. The heavy rains have saturated the ground and in many places the frost has lifted it, making the anchorage insecure.

If you have watched trees swaying and felt their bases, you can appreciate the movement there. In the gradual swaying, back and forth, the roots have gradually given way. Then a heavy gust has held them in an over-hanging position so the tree could not move back to its original place.

In most cases this has happened where a tree was without protection from other trees.

In the deep forest one does not find this so much. The old story of "united we stand divided we fall" holds true.

In recent storms many large limbs have been broken off. Where this has occurred it is possible that the wind has struck the tree in a way to set up a whirling motion which has twisted the limb. With little sap in the wood it has broken off.

Some limbs are shaded and are in the process of dying out, thus forming the tall clean trunk that is one of the features of this particular species.

One sometimes wonders why this tree has such shallow roots, yet it may have more growth underground than it has foliage.

Maybe the answer is that this type of tree came into existence soon after the ice age, when the soil was thin, and adapted itself to existing conditions.

But the over-all breaking down of the limbs and some of the trees in the deep forest is a part of nature's way of providing soil for the future generations of trees. The content of the fibres will be eventually broken down by other living things such as insects and fungi to enrich the ground for other plants to flourish. In this way a suitable medium for a new forest growth is provided.

Bye, Bye Dan Campbell

The Honorable Dan Campbell, minister of municipal affairs in British Columbia and Social Credit MLA from the Comox constituency of Vancouver Island, died politically in the legislature last Wednesday after a brief, shouting attack. He was 46.

His loss will be deeply felt by moderates within the party who had looked to him for leadership following the retirement or defeat of Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

Campbell was known to the press as an affable, if somewhat blustery, politician, who enjoyed life and displayed an uncharacteristic efficiency in discharging the responsibilities of his portfolio.

He was known to be capable of charming the turbulent B.C. legislature with clever turns of phrase such as "throwing fog in the gears" and "absolutely zilch."

But it was the over-use of these and similar phrases which signalled the undoing of the minister this week.

Opposition members sensed early in the session that something was wrong with their formidable adversary, but they had little clue how severe his verbal problems would become as the weeks dragged on.

Campbell hinted at his later demise early in February when he attacked "airy-fairy planners" in Victoria for promoting a scheme the government itself had proposed.

This was the brief but infamous incident over the alleged plan to build a bridge to the Gulf Islands.

The minister's condition appeared to worsen when, late in the throne debate, he came under fire for allowing the Interior municipality of Dufferin to be created.

The normally volatile Campbell failed to defend himself against implications that Dufferin had been formed to benefit developer Charlie Bennett, a staunch supporter of Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi.

Campbell again failed to answer charges later in the session that Bennett's assessments in Dufferin were unjustly low, in some cases at one per cent of market value for school taxes.

He also did not explain why the government appointed Bennett as Dufferin's first mayor.

His silence during those weeks was one of the saddest aspects of this session, and many members will be filled with deep regret that Campbell did not live long enough politically to rebut the charges in the manner he was so certainly capable of doing.

But for a time, all did not appear to have been lost for the honorable minister. His supporters were cheered when they saw him take his place in the education estimates debate to speak on the accreditation troubles at Campbell River Secondary School.

Surely, they thought, "Danny" would sock it to them on this one, for the school was in his constituency and they knew that an MLA such as Campbell knew his constituency's temper and tone.

From the moment he began to speak, everyone in the house sensed something special was happening. The minister waved his arms. He shouted, he puffed and blew words across the floor like a great gale.

He leaned into his microphone for effect, he paused, sipped water and burst forth again with ever intensifying volume.

For 45 minutes he stormed. All the members in the house felt he was just warming up to the issue. They thought he would begin to speak about the school at any moment and they waited in vain.

In fairness, it must be said of the honorable minister that he nearly spoke to the issue.

At the height of his tirade, Campbell bellowed: "The man on the street is fed up with professional people in the educational system—all those tippy-tap people running about planning music and art and all that baloney."

But the members across the floor just laughed and laughed and laughed. And the member from Comox sat down shortly thereafter. And the political life, which had coursed through his veins since the 1956 provincial election had stopped.

It was later diagnosed that the minister had died of a common political ailment — foot-in-mouth disease.

But the autopsy also showed the decline had begun at the policy level some years ago and had passed almost unnoticed until this week.

Funeral arrangements are in the hands of the premier, who is expected to call an election shortly.

Alas, he talked too much

Hate in Name Of Jesus

By KENNETH BAGNELL

(A former United Church clergyman, Bagnell is now a columnist for The Globe and Mail.)

There are any number of reasons to be skeptical about the Jesus Movement, but the main one is simply that it provides a seedbed for organized hate.

That is not an unfair allegation, for across North America, hundreds of parents have lost their children to a cult of the Jesus Movement, cannot locate them and when they receive letters, they are told, as one was recently, "May God damn your unbelieving hearts."

Reject Parents

To an outsider it seems entertaining, but when you meet, as I have, some of the distraught parents and hear the grim details, you know that the Jesus Movement, behind its festive innocence, has spawned a totalitarian cult.

The Children of God it is called, and among its gentle precepts are these three: (a) reject your parents, (b) reject your work, (c) reject your education.

This then, is a flowering of the Jesus Movement some churchmen have touted as the greatest thing since the Wesleyan revivals. It isn't, and we can see its fruits laid bare in parents who are organizing all over the continent in an effort to find their children, who have been turned into minions by quackpreachers.

There are at least two colonies of the Children of God in Canada, one in Toronto, the other in Windsor. But some Canadian teenagers have vanished into American groups, twenty of them, stretching from Los Angeles to Detroit. Anyone still unconvinced of their dubious character might well meet the mother and father who called me recently in anguish over their daughter.

She is a member of a colony which I can't divulge for fear reprisals may be taken against her. "They have broken her," the distraught father said, "I can't reach her any more, she just recites some verse from the Bible and follows the leader like she was hypnotized." Once she came home, but not alone, and then only to take a few belongings, the ones her leader told her to take. "I guess you'd call her a robot," her father said.

Occasionally the girl phones home, but her calls are always monitored, just as her mail is always opened. When her parents visit her, they are invariably told she is not there and after insisting, they see her, but always in the company of a leader who answers the questions while the girl remains silent except to recite a random verse from the Bible.

Few Defections

The cult is not large, only about 2,000 belong, but very few defect, only about 15 per cent as against 50 per cent for the larger Jesus Movement from which it sprang in California in 1967. Converts are invariably sent away from family and friends to recite verses and denounce their parents.

Separation from family is a principle which fundamentalism easily supports, for there are verses in the Bible which, if taken literally, suggest a day when son will turn against father. Many scholars know them to be hyperbole, but to the Children of God they are reason to join a cult in which they surrender their minds.

When the Germans Got Together in China

By JOHN BURNS

(Resident Peking correspondent of The Globe and Mail, Burns covered President Nixon's visit to China, including the trips to Shanghai and Hangchow.)

PEKING — When Henry Kissinger appeared to brief the press on the joint communique he looked a tired and careworn man. The presidential adviser said that he and Chiao Kuan-hua, Premier Chou En-lai's representative, had been working into the small hours for several nights running on the draft of the communique, but one White House correspondent who knows him well thought there were other reasons for his appearance.

"Henry may say the agreement's okay, but the way he looks I'd say he thinks it's lousy," the correspondent said.

Another veteran of the White House press corps suggested that there was more than a language difficulty behind Mr. Kissinger's offhand reference to Chiao as "the vice foreign minister whose name I despair of ever learning to pronounce."

The correspondent said: "Henry's far too smart for that. It was just his way of telegraphing his frustration at the whole affair."

The Kissinger briefing took place in an auditorium packed with correspondents and Chinese officials, who appeared to see no incongruity in their presence at what had originally been conceived of as a strictly U.S. affair. Most of the Chinese sat intent on Mr. Kissinger's words throughout the briefing, but one of them embarrassed himself and several White House officials by attempting to leave the auditorium while the briefing was still in progress.

A burly secret serviceman, detailed to see that nobody broke the embargo on the communique by leaving before Mr. Kissinger finished, stood fast in the official's way politely explaining that there could be no exceptions. After a few awkward moments, a White House official intervened and told the agent to let the man pass.

Despite Mr. Kissinger's caveat — "We are approaching this from the point of view of a scoreboard" — there was a lot of talk in the press room after the briefing about who had won and who had lost in the communique. A number of the more conservative correspondents appeared to be upset that Mr. Nixon had given way on Taiwan without receiving any substantial concessions in return, and one of them even threatened only half in jest to begin his departure story by recording that "President Nixon left China for home today, leaving behind Taiwan . . ."

One correspondent returned from a discussion with a top White House official convinced that Mr. Nixon was as dissatisfied with the communique as his press room critics, despite Mr. Kissinger's brave words at the briefing.

"When I suggested that Mr. Nixon came here expecting to lose," the correspondent reported "(the name of the official) told me: 'That's much too sophisticated a view.' "

Mr. Kissinger, who still speaks with a marked accent despite nearly 40 years in the U.S., is one of a group of presidential aides known around the White House as the Germans. Others from the group on the China trip included Mr. Nixon's press secretary, Ronald Ziegler, and one of his special assistants, H. R. Haldeman. Coincidentally, the Chinese side in the talks was also heavy with officials who have studied or served in Germany, including Premier Chou, who studied at Tubingen in 1923. Other "Germans" on the Chinese side were Chiao, who earned a doctorate from a German university in the 1930s, and Chi Peng-fein, the foreign minister, who served as the first Chinese ambassador to East Germany.

Two men who were much in evidence throughout the visit were the past and future correspondents of the New China News Agency in Canada, Pu Chao-min and Wang Chang-yun. Both were assigned to liaison work with the corps of 154 U.S. and foreign newsmen covering the visit, along with dozens of other English-speaking reporters and editors. Most of the U.S. correspondents were delighted with the assistance given to them by their Chinese counterparts, but some complained that their "keepers" were working them too hard, including one man who found it difficult to persuade his counterpart that he had to miss some items on Mr. Nixon's schedule in order to get some sleep.

BURNS

"Every time I put my head down the phone rings and it's this guy telling me to please come down and get on the bus," the fatigued man said. "He seems to think we're all built like Chou." The reference was to the Chinese premier who sleeps only four hours a night. Mr. Pu, incidentally, returned to China last month after putting in nearly five years in Canada. His place in Ottawa will be taken this month by Mr. Wang, who plans to travel to Ottawa with the new ambassador, Yao Kuang.

After Premier Chou En-lai's banquet speech on Friday, the central band of the People's Liberation Army struck up with a rousing revolutionary number which used to be about the most popular one in the country, but which has been less frequently played of late. Unable to recall its title, a member of the resident Peking press corps asked a number of Chinese officials, none of whom was able to identify it. Later he confirmed that the tune in question was "Sailing the Seas Depends on the Helmsman — Making Revolution Depends on Mao Tse-tung Thought," the lyrics of which were written by Lin Piao, defence minister and heir apparent to Mao Tse-tung who disappeared in mysterious circumstances last September. In what may have been another echo of the September events, there were far fewer military uniforms in evidence at the Nixon banquets than is normal for such affairs.

Like every other function on the visit the banquets were off limits to the diplomatic corps, which seethed with frustration all week. One Scandinavian diplomat appeared from time to time outside the press centre, hoping to catch the latest news from newsmen passing in and out, but most made do with what they could glean from shortwave radio broadcasts beamed into China from outside. Officers of the Canadian Embassy, located only 15 miles from the airport, listened to the arrival ceremonies on the Voice of America, which was relaying a commentary from the airport to Washington back to its relay station in the Philippines and thence to Peking — a total distance of about 15,000 miles. One wag spent that evening writing a letter to a friend, beginning with the observation that "The president of the United States arrived in Peking today, according to implausible reports reaching here from Washington . . ."

White House correspondents were surprised to see Mr. Nixon knocking back several thimbleful glasses off Mao-tai during the boisterous toasting session which ended the final banquet in Shanghai. The president, normally a very cautious drinker, told the correspondents before coming that he would treat the powerful Chinese spirit with respect, having heard all about its heady potential from Mr. Kissinger, who had been initiated during his previous visits to Peking. Some Chinese regard a bottoms-up toast as a sign of respect and the president may have been anxious to make a lasting impression of goodwill. It is not known how he took to the spirit, but at least he didn't wince.

Hardly anybody witnessed the scene as a blue denimed worker pulled down the Stars and Stripes from the flagstaff outside the Shanghai airport terminal. The man timed his move to coincide exactly with the departure of the second of two press planes which took off after the president's aircraft had disappeared out over the Pacific.

The worker took the U.S. flag, folded it meticulously, and slipped it into a crumpled brown paper bag. If he sensed the poignancy of the moment he didn't show it, ambling off afterward as if it were something he did every day. He didn't stop to say when he would be hoisting it again.

TARGET: SURGERY DELAYS

Loffmark Names Hospital Watchdog

LOFFMARK

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said Friday the government is stepping in to eliminate delays in open heart surgery at Vancouver General Hospital.

Loffmark told the legislature he will recommend that Donald Cox, soon to retire as deputy minister of hospital insurance, be given responsibility to make "decisions" to clear away delays in planning for additional open-heart surgery facilities at Vancouver General Hospital.

He said that hospital hasn't been making the same good progress in designing the facilities as has Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria and St. Paul's in Vancouver.

The minister stressed the danger of moving in a "peremptory" fashion on provision of facilities for fast-developing new surgical techniques in the heart field.

Asked about government plans to help rehabilitate young drug-users, Loffmark said the amount of money the public might provide for such services wouldn't begin to repair the damage drug-users do to themselves.

"If people want this kind of freedom, I don't think other people should have to foot the bill," Loffmark said, referring to the "Monday morning" effect of "Saturday night" parties on hash and other drugs.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said the low stipends for nurses in training at Vancouver General Hospital and St. Paul's Hospital were disgraceful and asked if Loffmark would make more money available.

Loffmark said nursing programs at hospitals were under the jurisdiction of hospital boards but noted that nursing programs in hospitals were being phased out anyway.

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster) said the provincial government spends only five cents of every health dollar — not including medicare payments — on preventive medicine as carried out by the public health department.

The estimated spending of $17.7 million for public health in BC. next year compares with last year's $17.3 million in Manitoba, a province with 900,000 people compared to B.C.'s 2.2 million, he said.

Cocke said inspection of public eating places and food vending machines is dangerously low and told the government to "think in terms of the number of sick people emerging from some of these eating places."

He said 58 public health inspectors for all of B.C. was just too few.

The lack of adequate dental care for the poor is another symptom of the weakness of public health care, Cocke said.

The MLA also called for more professional help for mental health patients who live in de-centralized boarding homes following release from Riverview Mental Hospital.

Getting them out of that institution is good, he said. But leaving them sitting in boarding homes without further therapy and opportunity is wrong.

Cocke also renewed his attack of last year on the conditions at the Riverview maximum security quarters where he said patients get limited amounts of fresh air and sunlight.

Debate of Loffmark's estimates continues Monday.

Research Direction 'Up to Politicians'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Politicians must protect the public interest by deciding how tax dollars will be allocated for scientific research in Canada, federal Science Minister Alastair Gillespie said Friday.

Gillespie told a University of British Columbia audience, including Nobel Price winner Dr. Gerhard Herzberg, that he thinks the senate science committee is right in saying that funds spent annually on science and technology should be managed in accordance with national needs and goals.

"The politician should have a great deal to say about which areas of research should receive support, and how much they should get — but not over which individual scientists get funds," he said.

"Once a project has been okayed, scientists should be the ones to decide who does it. They are the best judges of who within their community is best qualified to do research."

After speaking and answering questions for about 30 minutes, Gillespie noticed Dr. Herzberg in the audience and invited him to give his views on the issue.

CREATIVITY STRESSED

Dr. Herzberg, who has criticized the senate committee's report for recommending changes that could seriously inhibit scientific research, said he has always maintained government should decide how to apportion research money.

"What I have been saying is that once you have decided how much money to give, don't tell individual scientists how to go about their work. I feel research is a creative thing, comparable to writing a novel or painting a picture."

The audience of about 300 persons broke in applause.

Gillespie said he believes the senate committee was advocating more government direction to research in applied science and technology.

PRAGMATIC DECISIONS

He said that he was sure the government wouldn't try to give direction that would inhibit workers in basic research, "the area of Dr. Herzberg's great triumph."

Dr. Herzberg replied that the senate report, which Mr. Gillespie has said will be important in shaping future policy, mistakenly urges separation of basic and applied research and suggests that applied science research can be directed "along very precise lines."

Gillespie said he hasn't read the full report of the committee, chaired by Senator Maurice Lamontagne.

He said scientists should expect science policy to emerge gradually in a series of pragmatic decisions based on economic and social needs and other factors, rather than anticipate a white paper spelling out a comprehensive policy.

Herzberg told a press conference Wednesday he disagrees with the senate committee's recommendation that the National Research Council, where he worked for 21 years, should be done away with.

The report, issued in February as part of a series, called for the reduction of spending on basic research from 23 per cent to 10 per cent of the total spending on science and technology by 1980.

INNOVATION BLOCKED

A questioner suggested it was "an academic exercise" to speak of stimulating innovation when much of Canada's industry is owned or controlled by foreign companies.

Gillespie said thre's evidence that foreign ownership and control have "seriously affected" the capacity of Canadian industry to be innovative.

However, he added, foreign interests have brought into Canada technology and jobs that otherwise might not have developed.

He said the Science Council of Canada warned in a recent report that stimulating innovation in foreign-owned subsidiaries may be difficult.

But Gillespie said the government is concerned that a lower proportion of research and development is done in industry in Canada than in any other western country.

JAPAN STUDY

"A very large percentage of research and development is done in our government laboratories—37 per cent is done in industry and 33 per cent in government."

Gillespie heads a 40-man delegation which leaves Vancouver Sunday to study the situation in Japan, where 10 per cent of the research and development is done under government auspices and 60 per cent goes on in industry.

"It is common there to break up basic research, applied research and developments," he said.

"And it's interesting that Japan spends proportionately less than Canada — .05 per cent of the gross national product compared to our .08 per cent."

'ANTI-SUICIDE BIAS' HIT

Society has had an anti-suicide bias for too long, Herb Capozzi (SC-Vancouver Centre) told the legislature Friday.

He said the law against taking one's life is good for most cases but the law creates agonies for people in certain situations.

These are some elderly people, the seriously ill and those who have been for whatever reasons, deeply separated from social contact.

"They have earned the right to die," Capozzi said. But he stopped short of saying suicide should be made legal in some cases.

He said many people look forward to an afterlife, so why does society prevent them from achieving their wish.

"Why do we hold back on the people who would welcome the chance to move across?" Capozzi asked.

Many sick people are kept alive only because of the intense efforts of their doctors and modern technology.

He emphasized he was not promoting euthanasia or state murder but rather the "singular right of the individual to select the right to finally die in dignity and peace."

Music Buys Player Out

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A young musician has been ordered to perform for military and charitable groups for the next two years in lieu of going into the United States Army.

Stephen Smith was placed on three years probation Friday by Judge Clarence Allgood after pleading guilty to charges of failing to report for induction. He was placed on probation on condition that his musical group — Smith, Perkins and Smith — appear before charitable institutions and at military bases.

Logging Firms Want IWA Out

The International Woodworkers of America must not be allowed to interfere with the dealing between larger forest products firms and smaller contractors, the legislature's forestry and fisheries committee was told Friday.

Briefs presented by MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. and representatives of smaller logging contractors said sharing of logging rights is often jeopardized by union demands.

On Vancouver Island, the IWA has demanded that companies holding tree farm licences set aside certain areas for full logging operations by small contractors and that some of their operations be handled by union workers.

In a written brief, MacMillan Bloedel said the smaller firms don't have the equipment, finances or experience to operate full "stump to dump" operations.

Provincial regulations governing tree farm licences on the Island stipulate that the major firms holding the licences must sub-contract 30 per cent of their work to give small operators enough business.

The Western Independent Log Haulers Association, based in Ladysmith, said the IWA has attempted to make independent owner-operators become union members, even though they cannot be represented.

The association said the union also wanted IWA drivers placed on contractors' trucks when company drivers were laid off.

'We're Not Bed-Bunnies'

PERRY

By LINDA DEUTSCH

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A vague discontent has broken into open and harsh criticism about the way women are portrayed in the movies, usually produced, directed and written by men.

Critics say films stereotype women as empty-headed bed bunnies—at best.

Actresses complain they can't find work or if they do they are cast as prostitutes.

"To view films made in the last 10 years," says a woman screenwriter, "is to view a world where women make up one per cent of the population, don't work professionally and are either whores or harpy wives . . ."

Recent Academy Award nominations brought the point home. Best-actress contenders portrayed a neurotic prostitute, a dope-smoking madam, two long-dead queens and a divorcee who shares her bisexual love with a man.

Why the deficit of great dames in movies?

"It is very difficult to film virtue," sacs actress Gena Rowlands. "Its much easier to play a bad woman." Also, she notes, not many scripts these days are written by women.

"Men are making movies for themselves, not for audiences," says actor-turned-director Jackie Cooper. "I guess it's one of the last desperate efforts to keep women back in the kitchen."

Writer Eleanor Perry, whose Diary of a Mad Housewife zeroed in on the misery of today's woman locked in yesterday's role, says she still has to fight to show women as they are.

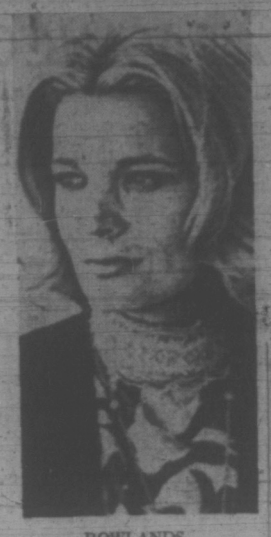
"Hollywood believes that a woman cannot be a sympathetic character if she swears," complains Miss Perry who had to chop four-letter words out of her latest script. "In life those particular women in those particular situations would have used those words."

The dearth of roles for actress shows in employment figures. A trade paper recently reported that in movies currently shooting, actors outnumbered actresses 144 to 66 in feature roles, and in 26 new TV fall shows men outnumbered women 283 to 81.

But hints of change can be found. Miss Rowlands, actress wife of actor-director John Casavetes, sees her role in their Minnie and Moscowitz as the birth of a 1970s female film type.

The heroine, Minnie, is intelligent, liberated and self-supporting—but also unhappy, emotionally wounded and vulnerable. She's the end product of Women's Lib, says Miss Rowlands.

"We're going to see more Minnies as Women's Lib gains," says the actress.



ROWLANDS

NEW EVIDENCE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man's shirt and undershirt stained with what is believed to be blood were entered as new evidence Friday in the controversial death of Chilcotin Indian Fred Quilt.

Thes hirts were handed to B.C. Supervising Coroner Glen McDonald by Chief Doug Hance of the Anahim band as McDonald proceeded with a review of the case on orders from Attorney-General Leslie Peterson. The coroner ordered an analysis of the stains.

Quilt, 55, a member of the Stone band of Chilcotin Indians, died in hospital at Williams Lake, Nov. 30 of infection from a perforated intestine.

An inquest jury ruled the death accidental, but Indian spokesmen allege he was beaten two days before his death by two RCMP officers from the Alexis Creek detachment.

Lorne Greene Outdraws Humphrey in Alley

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — About 500 persons crowded into a bowling alley where former Vice-President Hubert Humphrey was making an appearance. But Humphrey apparently wasn't the attraction.

Most of the spectators polled by newsmen said they had come to the alley to "see Lorne Greene bowl." Greene, star of television's Bonanza, bowled in a foursome with his wife, Humphrey and former Minnesota Vikings football player Tom Lipton.

WASHINGTON — A three-judge federal court ruled here Friday that Alger Hiss, the former state department official convicted of perjury in 1950, is entitled to receive a government pension.

The court ruled that the so-called Hiss Act — the 1954 law that effectively prohibited Hiss from receiving his pension — was an ex post facto law that punished Hiss retroactively for actions committed before the act was passed. Hiss, 67, now working as a printing salesman in New York City and writing a book about the new deal, said Friday night, "I can't lose them all . . . this is one small step towards vindication. I shall keep up the efforts I've been making."

HISS

. . . entitled to pension

VANCOUVER — Arthur Towell, 44, who was confined at the Riverview Mental Hospital for nearly five years following the rifle slayings of a University of British Columbia assistant professor and his wife, was found not guilty by reason of insanity Friday and ordered held in custody pending the pleasure of the lieutenant-governor-in-council.

Towell was charged with non-capital murder in the deaths July 6, 1967, of UBC assitsant professor David Webster, 31, and his 30-year-old wife Marlene, killed in the backyard of their home by a sniper in a nearby house. Two other persons were injured in the 20-minute barrage of shots.

INGOLSTADT — One oil train crashed into another one in the Ingolstadt station killing three persons, and afterward the stationmaster threw himself in front of a moving train and died, police in this West German city said.

John Engelhardt, 76, and his 75-year-old wife were killed when an exploding tank car was catapulted into the former yard watchman's office where they lived. Gerhard Gegbert, 29, the engineer of the train that hit the other also was killed. The body of Otto Mayer, 50, the stationmaster, was found on a track outside Ingolstadt.

PHILADELPHIA — Ecclesiastes Robinson, 34, in the house of corrections awaiting trial for car theft, was told to take an official's auto to the prison garage to have it washed.

After the car was washed, instead of returning it to a parking lot, he drove it through an open gate and out of the prison. Police caught up with Robinson about 15 minutes later. He was returned to the prison and charged on a second count of auto theft.

WASHINGTON — Maj. Gen. Vernon Walters, a veteran U.S. Army intelligence officer who is fluent in seven foreign languages, was nominated Thursday by President Nixon to become deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

The deputy director's post at the nation's top intelligence agency has been vacant since Jan. 1 when Marine Corps Lt. Gen. Robert Cushman stepped down after being nominated by the White House to become commandant of the Marine Corps. The post carries a salary of $40,000 a year.

LAKE ORION, Mich. — Former teamster president James Hoffa says the U.S. unemployment problem could be solved by governmental support of a 20-hour work week.

"It is high time and overdue that someone talk about the basic problems of a reduced work week and lower age of retirement," he said. "Then you can allow young people to go to work and secure the number of years required for pensions or social security, and allow them to raise their families and let the old people enjoy life."

HOUSTON — Yoko Ono Lennon, wife of former Beatle John Lennon, was awarded temporary custody Friday of Kyoko, her daughter by a former marriage, but lawyers said the child and her father had vanished.

The girl's father, British film-maker Anthony Cox, had temporary custody of his daughter pending a hearing on permanent custody due later this year. He was apparently no longer in Houston, where he had been living with his second wife, Melinda, and Kyoko.

Denials End Saulnier Inquiry

MONTREAL (CP) — An inquiry into the conduct of Jean-Jacques Saulnier ended Friday with denials by the Montreal police director of various charges levelled against him since hearings began six weeks ago.

Mr. Saulnier, the only witness Friday, testified he had "never received any protection money or heard of any of my men receiving any."

The Quebec Police Commission inquiry was ordered by Justice Minister Jerome Choquette on a request by Mayor Jean Drapeau following reports that Mr. Saulnier, while head of the police morality squad in the 1960s, had accepted a $700 color television set from a hotel owner.

Testimony at the inquiry expanded, to include Mr. Saulnier's conduct while an inspector in charge of a station and since he became police chief in May, 1971.

Mr. Saulnier, who was called to the stand several times, testified previously that he had received the color TV set in 1966 but had tried for six weeks to give it back to the donor. It was later picked up by the hotel manager. Mr. Saulnier was reprimanded for the delay in returning the set by Jean-Paul Gilbert, police director.

TIMING UNCERTAIN

Judge Roger Asselin, Judge Ludovic Lapierre, and Gerard Tobin, former police chief of Ste. Foy, a suburb of Quebec City, have set no deadline for their final report, which is empowered to make recommendations to the police commission. The three men, headed by Judge Gosselin, sat on the inquiry panel.

Constable Leo Villeneuve had testified he found a "payoff" list in November, 1966, that "included the name of Jean-Jacques Saulnier."

The 32-year-old policeman, who said he was punished for finding the list, said he had been told by a former member of the morality squad that Mr. Saulnier was accepting bribes and "that everybody knew it."

Under questioning by Judge Gosselin, Mr. Saulnier said he had never been aware that Martha Adams had been warned of impending police raids, adding that he knew of no "unfruitful" raids on her apartment.

Miss Adams, currently awaiting trial on charges of living off the avails of prostitution and operating a bawdy house, testified at the inquiry that between 1963 and 1965 she had been tipped off about raids three or four times but had never known who was warning her.

ADMITS WRITING LIST

A night club owner, whose name was forbidden to be published by the inquiry, testified he had written the list mentioned by Constable Villeneuve, but he said it was a Christmas gift list and it was dictated to him by his partner.

Mr. Saulnier denied receiving any money or gifts, either from Miss Adams or from the two men involved in the writing of the list, discovered in a raid on a suburban LaSalle apartment.

The police director also spoke out against testimony at the inquiry dealing with several aspects of his leadership as the force's top officer.

Two deputy-directors and one assistant director testified there was a lack of communication, consultation and nier's appointment as chief.

The police director said he had installed a direct "hot line" telephone in the offices of his three deputy-directors, in answer to the charge of a lack of communication.

DENIES INSTRUCTIONS

He said he never instructed anyone not to inform the deputy-directors or the three assistant directors but "there is no reason why information should follow the line of hierarchy."

"I wanted the information to be exchanged directly with the services concerned and avoid all the red tape. I wanted immediate action. When we had information, we acted.

"My orders were to communicate the information to everyone in all the services. It functioned and was successful."

Mr. Saulnier also said the political prominence of his brother Lucien had been a hindrance rather than an asset in his career on the Montreal police force.

Lucien Saulnier recently resigned as chairman of the Montreal Urban Community executive committee.

"All through my career," the police director said, "I've had to suffer my brother's presence. I was always last on promotion lists so that it could never be said my promotions were because of him."

When named police chief last year, Mr. Saulnier skipped several ranks.

Quebec Grants

MONTREAL (CP) — State Secretary Gerard Pelletier announced Friday that two Quebec cultural institutions will receive grants totalling $550,000 from the federal government.

He told a news conference the Theatre du Nouveau Monde will be given $300,000 and Jeunesse Musicale du Canada will get a grant of $250,000.

The TNM will use the money to move across from its present home at the Theatre Port Royal in Montreal's Place des Arts to the Comedie Canadienne which has been recently used as a film house.

The Comedie Canadienne, under Gratien Gelinas, has been one of the most important theatre centres of Montreal. It will be the TNM's first permanent home in its 20-year history.

The grant to Jeunesse Musicale du Canada will be used by the group to move the Music Pavilion from Montreal's Man and His World summer exhibition site to its centre in Oxford Park in the Eastern Townships.

A TOUCH OF HISTORY

Rough hewn and massive on the outside, the delicacy of the woman's touch is evident as soon as you enter this home. Commanding views northwards to the sea and mountains are there to behold. Offered at $100,000.

More work, less downtime

Les Wyles, of Wyles Trucking, Penticton, wanted more work and less downtime when he traded other-make machines for this Cat 941 track loader and a Caterpillar 950 Wheel Loader. And that's what he got.

His 130 hp 950 with its 2½ cu. yd. bucket digs basements in double-time; literally twice as fast as his former machine did. And the digging is in "as tough going as you would find anywhere in the Okanagan Valley".

His 70 hp, 1½ cu. yd. 941 showed its productivity and versatility during a job in an apple orchard. In two and a half hours it took out 25 old tree stumps and did some dozing and grading to add an acre to the orchard. The grower was happy with the work. The 941 "does a great job", he said, and he liked its maneuverability that got it between rows of trees without damage.

Les Wyles has increased his work volume with his two Caterpillar-built loaders and he knows he will decrease his downtime with Cat dependability. This plus the fact that Finning's unmatched parts and repair services is readily available from Vernon, as it is from 32 other locations in B.C. and the Northwest Territories, gives him the productivity and reliability he was after.

Want these profit advantages in your track or wheel loaders? If so, follow Les Wyles' example and see your Finning sales representative today.

Municipal Tax Restructuring Should Be Next Step

• YOUR TAXES •

By I. H. ASPER

With the federal tax system no longer occupying the spotlight, tax reformers are now free to turn their attention to the less complicated but equally important subject of provincial and municipal tax restructuring.

It was always a matter of regret, even to members of the Carter Royal Commission, that federal reform was hatched in a vacuum and necessarily proceeded without taking into account the prospective provincial and municipal needs.

Perhaps this was appropriate a decade ago when the main taxing authority was the national government, but today local governments tax about as much as the federal. This when you update the federal system you have polished only one side of the coin.

Although the average taxpayer makes little distinction between the breeds of dog that bite him, the fact is that he pays more in taxes to the local governments than to the senior authorities. And the local system is less fair than the federal was, even before the federal reform plan was devised.

Unfortunely, all discussions on tax reform whatever the government level involved, begin by ignoring the fundamental issue: the amount being spent by governments.

While the following observations do not break with this tradition, it must be observed that general tax relief, as opposed to the mere shifting of tax burdens from one group to another, will never be achieved until Canadians face squarely the central issue — aren't governments spending just a bit too much.

Or in other words, should government increases in spending not be tied in some way to increases in productivity or other yardsticks that measure the advancement of national wealth.

However, to raise this argument is to whistle into the wind. The idea of fiscal control is enough to congeal the blood of the politician, who makes these decisions and who is not noted for his courage in facing the demands of an electorate which somehow thinks it is entitled to whatever it can get, presumably for free.

The public education system hasn't advanced to the stage where people are required to learn what the economy, or the tax system is all about. So unless we elect masochists or fiscal statemen with the zeal of a Kamikaze pilot, it is unlikely the government spending convulsion will be brought under control.

Thus, provincial and municipal tax reform will necessarily be based essentially on plucking the same geese in a manner which produces the least squawks. That is, shifting, but not reducing the load, in the interest of fairness.

That being the case, the most critical need is the revamping of property tax, particularly to the extent it is used to finance the cost of education. Almost all political spokesmen now agree this inequity must be removed.

We now have reached the stage in our social thinking where the majority recognize that education is an asset which can be measured by the economic advancement of its recipient. It therefore follows that its cost should be repaid by its recipients on the basis of their economic means. Thus, taxing property to finance education, as only one example, becomes inequitable.

Take some examples. Home A is worth $20,000, and is occupied by a couple whose children have left home. The husband earns $15,000 per year, the wife $6,000. They have clear title. Assume their tax for education is $300.

Home B, next door is worth the same, but has a mortgage of $16,000, and its occupants consist of a man, earning $8,000 per year (partly because his education is less than his neighbor in Home A) and his wife, who looks after their three children and is unable to work. Home B is taxed the same as A, yet their social and economic positions vary dramatically.

It is relatively easy to document variations of this fiscal inequity, but surely by now it needs no further proof. No solution will be completely adequate until Canada accepts a national, as opposed to a local, or regional, technique of financing education.

The average person moves every four or five years. He is highly and desirably mobile, and it is ultimately unfair that the people of Chilliwack should finance the education of one of its sons who then moves to Chicoutimi where he works and pays his local taxes — because the flow is generally a one-way street.

However, a national education finance plan may be a long time coming. Until that time arrives, the beleaguered property owner must be relieved. Regardless of the technique ultimately adopted, education costs must be financed by a technique related to one's earnings; and that's only the beginning of provincial-municipal tax reform.

Asper is a Winnipeg lawyer and leader of the Manitoba Liberal Party.

ART
glenn howarth

A memorial exhibition honoring the contribution of Ina Uthoff to local arts in Victoria is now hanging in the Victoria Public Gallery, an institution she helped create. She was a prominent art educator and founded the Victoria School of Art in the 1930s. And until a few years before her death she was art critic for the Colonist.

She died last summer. The last show she reviewed for the Colonist was Jack Kidder's sculptures at the old Print Gallery on Wilmot Place. At the time, Ina, too old to look after herself, had been moved by her family from her small private home into an apartment. She told Jack Kidder, "I hate the place. I hate the plastic chandeliers. I think I'll run away somewhere and just paint." This she said at 80 years old!

Though her contribution to the community was that of an art educator and organizer, she was also an artist. Her long career meanders over half a century as she tried her hand at each fresh idea she encountered. While she did not develop into an historical force, this show testifies to her personality and her insight. She made some fine objects.

She could handle bold freedom as well as feminine delicacy. She ranged from accurate and loving portraiture to pure fantasy. And in her work is recorded the art ideas that were in the air of Victoria at various times throughout the past 50 years.

Collaborating with Emily Carr, she brought Mark Tobey here to teach. But it was not only Ina's students who gained from his ideas. In a watercolor titled Sea Fantasy, Ina attempted Tobey's eastern mysticism. She understood.

She was influenced by the work of Emily Carr. She brought cubism and expressionism to her students. This last style shines in a gouache entitled Three Oysters. The shells have disappeared in the attack of interpretation of some other value, a painterly one, provides the strength as the three pearl hollow forms grow out of the frame, push outwards and hang motionless.

Early work from her student days in her native Scotland show the artist a beautiful and light-hearted woman. An etching like Woman with Forlorn Dog is quite lovable. She made a small illustrative drawing in an art nouveau style of maidens playing musical pipes in the forest. Lettered in art nouveau hand around the border is the inscription, "As the Hours and Days on Swift Wings Go, May Life for You Like Music Flow." This was Ina as an idealist young lady. But sylvan is not descriptive of a long career that knew no retirement.

Also at the Gallery are the works of Windsor Utley of Salt Spring Island.

With a fast hand Utley generates paintings that are a curious blend of lyricism and energy. The strength of his work is imposing.

His images have the edge of solidity when viewed from the middle of the room but approaching his larger works, standing 10 feet away, the image dissolves into harsh physical reality. Tube color. Black line. Neutral buff primer coat breaks through, softening the hastily applied paint in a thousand places. There is no microcosm of cherished paint work here!

There is only an assemblage of discontinuous illusion. Figures are set in architectural landscape wherg perspective points of view converge on many horizons. While he pretends to deep space, he drops this renaissance lie half-realized. Constantly cheating expectations for a completed image, Utley makes the eye uneasy. The effect is powerful.

He is an experienced image maker who knows how little it takes to crystalize form. It is as though the figures and animals had been conceived in thin air and held fixed while Utley filled them in as economically and as carelessly as he dare. Paint is slashed on.

Courage, confidence and flash are his highest values; they are sustained in each painting. Strokes are tightly timed. Clipped might be an accurate word. William Blake wrote the aphorism "Enough or too much!" Utley would not have time to utter this too long phrase; perhaps moving his brush in time to the single monosyllable — Ah!

A courageous swordsman of the brush with the whole of art history for a target. There was classicism in Greece, the rebirth of classicism in the renaissance, then neo-classicism in the 18th century. Picasso researched Classicism, and today, in the Gulf Islands, there is Utley's Classicism.

During many trips to Italy, four since 1951, Utley fixated on old Mythology; the Three Graces, Appollo and Daphne, Venus, Venus and Cupid, shading into Christian and medieval myths.

Utley however, is not a believer. He does not rebuild these myths. For him, they are outlines in a cultural storybook between which he can playfully color. Old culture becomes a playground, enjoyed but not embraced. It is a daring freedom, swinging from anachronistic subject matter with an expressionist brush style. Utley must be the gymnast of Art History.

Anchoring his imagery to cultural monoliths, Utley runs his dizzying speed on a worn Olympian track. This is his concern at the present moment. The critic looks forward to his next field of research.

Subject matter aside, energy and exuberance must rate highly on any scale of values. For this Utley must be seen. It is no wonder he had a history of being a good art educator. Such enthusiasm cannot help but infect others.

Last Hurrah for an Era

Leave the ironing, turn off the hockey game, call the babysitter and go see The Last Picture Show.

Praise is cheap, but this film stands out from last year's crop the way no American production has since Bonnie and Clyde.

It is a great nostalgic recreation of small town Texas life in the early 1950's.

Anyone who grew up during the immediate post-World War II period owes it to himself to see this movie.

The Last Picture Show is only the second feature film by 32-year-old director Peter Bogdanovich. But it is a marvel of human understanding, compassion, character development and sense of time and place.

Bogdanovich's lonely tale unfolds in 1951 in a Lone Star dust trap named Anarene, a town which seems to be held together by flypaper and screen doors.

You can almost feel the dirt seep between your toes as the camera sweeps across Main Street to Sam the Lion's pool hall and picture show.

Sam also runs a dreary cafe. Sam the Lion with sad eyes, nicknamed by an old girl friend long since married to a rich man.

We don't see enough of Ben Johnson in this role, and this is the only significant weakness in the Last Picture Show.

Sam has seen life pass him by, as have all of Anarene's older residents, but it has not made him bitter. He just rolls his cigaraettes and lets the clock drain his dreams away.

Timothy Bottoms is the main character. He's named

BOTTOMS
. . . naive honesty

Sonny, is about 19 years old, and is the one who inadvertently takes Sam's place in Anarene.

Bottoms should have received an Academy Award nomination for best actor in this role. He gives the part a naive emotional honesty and an odd mute understanding of other people which makes him tolerant without making an issue of it.

His only problem is that life hasn't kicked him around enough. He doesn't quite understand what is happening to him.

Jeff Bridges as Duane, Sonny's best friend, and Cloris Leachman as Ruth, the high school coach's wife, won two of the movie's eight Oscar nominations for their supporting roles.

Miss Leachman has that seedy, lonely yet somehow dignified sexiness reminiscent of Patricia Neal in Hud. Duane is like countless other conventionally handsome and rugged young men who is too dumb ever to realize that the rules of the game gave him all the dirty jobs.

Bogdanovich shot The Last Picture in black and white, a rarity these days of super color engineering. But the device is disarmingly effective, because it fixes Anarene in the past as effectively as the film's meticulously accurate details.

This movie hangs with a heavy sense of dead time reluctantly brought back to life to breathe and sing again despite its poverty and record of wasted potential.

Bogdanovich recreates item, after item of that period with stunning visual accuracy. The cheap Chevy pickups and leaden Mercurys, ducktail haircuts, high-top tennis shoes, calf-length skirts and saddle shoes, big wooden radios and the flickering imagery of early television programs.

What wonderful, what dreary times the early 1950's were. But no previous movie about this period ever filmed sex the way it really was. Bogdanovich gives us necking and copulation in back seats on country roads and in hot nervous bedrooms.

Sex in The Last Picture Show is a weapon, a terror, a joke, a demand for conformity and a wall against the emptiness outside.

Sex is what most people get on their minds when they have nothing else to think about, and in Anarene there wasn't much to think about.

Sonny and Duane go their rounds with foxy Jacy, the washout blonde daughter of Sam's old girl. She's got every lousy sexual trick in the book at her command until her virginity's on the line — then she's as dumb as the rest of her friends.

A young woman named Cybil Shepherd has her first movie role as Jacy. Her mother is played by Ellen Burstyn, and when mom wheels into prominence on the screen behind a pair of heart-shaped sunglasses, we immediately know that Jacy is going to turn out the same way, no matter how much money she marries.

The acting in this movie is the best collective effort in any recent film in memory.

The background music is all country and western, but Bogdanovich outdoes himself with a scene from Howard Hawks' Red River, the last picture shown at Sam's theatre.

Duane is leaving for Korea the next day. Both he and Sonny have lost Jacy forever. Sam and the stability he represented are gone. Unable to put their feelings into proper words, the two friends go to the movies on their last night together.

On the blinking screen before them sits John Wayne and one million head of cattle.

"Take 'em to Missouri," shouts Wayne, and all the other cowboys explode in whoops.

It's the last hurrah of a simple western-life style. For Sonny and Duane, the scene is a complicated symbol of their own passing and the naive and unknown hopelessness of their lives.

The black and white colors of the movie are themselves symbols of the restricted Texas universe which traps the people of Anarene.

But the movie ends gently with two people holding hands. If there's no hope in Bogdanovich's Texas, at least there's contact.

Writers Honor 'Snowbird' Man

By RON ROBINSON
CJVI Program Director

Gene MacLellan, the Maritimer who hit the big time with his compositions "Snowbird" and "Put Your Hand in the Hand of the Man" has just been made an honorary lifetime member of the International Song Writers Union of Canada. In a special presentation Friday in Calgary, he became the first composer to have his name placed on the golden honour role of the I.S.O. MacLellan has the distinction of having had his songs recorded by over 170 international artists. Although he regards himself as basically a song writer he is more and more in demand as a singer. He is currently touring Canada with The Bells, and will appear in Victoria at the Royal Theatre Wednesday night. (Although The Bells were the subjects of that most timely cover article in last Saturday's Weekend Magazine in this paper, box office response locally has been slow.)

Speaking of concerts, "nostalgia in rock" seems to be attracting audiences and record buyers. A series of "Rock and Roll Revival" stage shows in New York has brought cheers from audiences pushing 30 or already past it, for Bo Diddley, Chuck Berry, Rick Nelson, the Five Satins, the Coasters, Garry "U.S." Bonds, and Bill Haley and the Comets. Record labels are reissuing ablums by artists and groups in their original performances. RCA was the first major label to do so by releasing old Elvis Presley sides on the economy-priced Camden label, "Elvis Sings Flaming Star" (CAS 2304); it made history as the first low list price LP to hit the charts.

MAILING

Soprano Joins Symphony

An outstanding Canadian mezzo soprano, Phyllis Mailing, is to be soloist with Victoria Symphony at the upcoming concert pair which will also feature four Russian harpists.

Miss Mailing will sing the vocal episodes in the Spanish ballet suite for orchestra, Manuel de Falla's El Amor Brujo (Wedded by Witchcraft).

She will also act as the narrator in Benjamin Britten's fascinating A Young People's Guide to the Orchestra, a set of variations on a theme by Purcell exploring the timbres of the individual instruments.

A notable performer of both traditional and modern music, Miss Mailing's career has included work in Germany, Vienna and London, coast-to-coast Canadian tours, a tour of Russia in 1971, critical acclaim for her performance in a New York Philharmonic series, recording of works by Stravinsky under the composer's direction and numerous CBC performances.

She has had several works specially created for her and has sung leading roles in Canadian operas by Harry Somers, Murray Schafer, Robert Turner and Jack Behren.

Currently she is on the staff of Simon Fraser University where she conducts the much admired SFU Madrigal Singers.

CHITIRI ARPI

Alla, Oxana, Natalia and Marina are four young Russian women who graduated from the Moscow State Conservatory of Music in 1956.

All harpists, their decision to remain together as an ensemble was the result of a triumphant group appearance that year at the Sixth International Youth Festival.

The only touring harp ensemble in the world, their concertizing has taken them all over Soviet Russia and neighboring countries, but the Canadian tour which brings them to Victoria March 12 and 13 marks their first crossing of the Atlantic.

Chitiri Arpi (Four Harps) will be the guests of Victoria Symphony for the next pair of concerts, playing two Baroque concertos with Laszlo Gati and the orchestra.

A number of contemporary composers have started to write specifically for this group. But in order to provide audiences with music that is familiar and of wide appeal, Marina Smirnova has been kept busy making new arrangements for her group.

As a result the quartet plays scores of compositions representative of most periods and styles. For instance, with the Victoria orchestra Chitiri Arip will play Bach-Vivaldi and Handel concertos.

Then on March 15, when they appear in recital at McPherson playhouse, their program will be arrestingly comprehensive. Included will be, besides several short Russian compositions, fragments from Grieg's Peer Gynt suite, an Elgar Serenade, two Spanish numbers by Albeniz, a Strauss waltz — Voices of Spring —, and quite a lot of music from ballet scores such as Delibers' Sylvia, Tchaikovsky's Sleeping Beauty and Nuteracker and Khachaturian's Gayane.

Preparation for festival performance involves more than actors in rehearsal. At Mount View Secondary, a major feature on the set of their entry is a large portrait. The entire setting is being made by the students and here Richard Franklin paints the portrait, the drawing of which has been done by Cathie Cudby.

Curtain Going Up Next Week On

The Ass and the Philosopher is one of two entries from Victoria Senior Secondary, a school which has frequently provided honor play. Henry Low is the centre of attraction here with Raydene Good kneeling and left to right, Diane Dickson, Elizabeth Harris and Karen Pritchard. Bert Farr is director.

Schools Drama Festival

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The longest running school drama festival in North America occurs right here in this city and is about to take off on its 32nd annual go-round.

Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival, born in 1940 under sponsorship of what was then the provincial government's drama department, began with a program of three or four entries.

This year's event, which begins next Friday at Lansdowne Junior Secondary School, has a total of 32 entries representing 24 schools and runs through 11 sessions.

Various school stages play host to the sessions and the whole thing winds up March 18 with an honor program at Victoria Senior Secondary.

In preparation and presentation literally hundreds of youngsters and teachers are occupied on and off stage. A few parents get into the act also in the line of dutifully providing items to be used or worn.

Backing up the young people who make up the casts of the 32 plays are boys and girls using skills-in-training such as home economics and industrial arts.

Some of the properties and most of the sets are constructed, painted and decorated by students and for some plays, such as Victoria Senior Secondary's The Ass and the Philosopher, home ec' girls are making the costumes.

The Schools Drama Festival has never been overtly a competitive affair, although it is impossible to prevent youngsters feeling competitive about their particular school's achievement when it is involved in a team activity with other schools.

In order to lower the intensity of this feeling however, winners are not named at the end of the sessions. Instead, three good quality productions are selected for the final honor program.

Adjudicators are asked to make the selection on the basis of representing elementary and both secondary levels in a program that from an audience standpoint will be balanced and entertaining.

Scholarship and book prizes are awarded only for outstanding individual performances.

In this year's festival the competitive element is still further obscured by eliminating public adjudications. It is the opinion of the committee that audiences are not interested in this part of the proceedings.

Consequently University of Victoria theatre department's Barbara McIntyre, adjudicating elementary, and Clara Hare, adjudicating secondary plays, will remain unseen by the public.

As criticism is an important aspect of the festival situation, however, they will visit the respective schools following each session and talk with directors and casts.

Quality in choice of play material has grown with the years. Glancing over the up-coming program and comparing it with some from the past reveals notable improvement.

In particular it is good to find almost total elimination of the cliche titles and repetitious selection.

Classics, from fairy tales to Shakespeare, contemporary masters and Theatre of the Absurd will be presented during the seven full days of afternoon and evening programs.

At the Friday opening Lansdowne Junior Secondary, Central Junior and Mount View Senior will present plays. Saturday's session will be held at St. Ann's Academy with North Saanich and High Rock Juniors on the program.

Curtain times in the evening are 7:30 and in the afternoons beginning the week of March 13, 1:30 p.m.

Other schools entered are Bank Street, Sir James Douglas, Hillcrest, Fairburn, Campus View, Blanshard, Victoria West, Malvern and Westerham, Lakehill, Saanichton and Glenlyon elementaries; Oak Bay Junior, and Senior, Mount Douglas Senior, Glenlyon, Reynolds Junior, S. J. Willis Junior, Ucluelet Senior and Malvern and Westerham secondaries.

For young actors nothing is more successful than permitting them to explore totally strange and amusing characters. Ives Cabrole is a French author of delightfully rural farces that have appeared in festival honor performances more than once. At Central Junior drama director James Dulmage has selected Cabrole's Neighbors and it will be seen Monday evening on the program at Oak Bay Junior Secondary.

Festivals are fun, so what are we waiting for? Blanshard Elementary cast just can't wait for their turn which comes Wednesday afternoon. They'll be at home on their own school stage.

Discussions of the script play an important part in pre and early rehearsal periods, especially when the play is one of the great classics of the theatre like John Millington Synge's Riders to the Sea. Here director Roland Jones confers with his Oak Bay Senior Secondary cast in preparation for their performance of the play, Monday. Left to right are Alix Taylor, Jones, Rebecca Reeves, Jill Turyk and Dave Bassett.

World Hockey and Some Of the Men at the Top

There were some related items in the news this week. Mostly about hockey. And now to make a buck—quick!

First, the story that Gary Davidson and Dennis Murphy, the generally-acknowledge co-founders of the new World Hockey Association, had taken out $250,000 for finder's fees, made the most fuss.

Secondly, there was the survey which said the fledgling WHA had an 80 per cent chance of success.

Now there's a tie-in here, and, it concerns basketball, hockey, and quick windfall.

Go back a few years to when the University of California at Los Angeles Bruins were becoming the scourge of the collegiate basketball courts in the U.S. There were a couple of fellows at UCLA then who couldn't make the club. One was Davidson. Another was Don Regan. After college they played industrial basketball, and when they heard the buzz that some people were interested in forming a rival league to the all-powerful National Basketball Association, they asked in, and were accepted.

They began right at the top, and asked Murphy if he would assist them by doing the marketing research. Davidson got in as president, Regan as general counsel, Murphy as special consultant.

The die was cast, the ABA got off floor, slowly at first, but since then has prospered. First there was a question of money; then fan support, but not for long. Because within four years, it was the NBA which was bringing up the subject of a merger.

'Most Profitable Professional Sport'

Davidson had gone by then. So had Regan. But they both felt they had much to do with safeguarding the ABA from quick financial ruin. Besides they had enjoyed a measure of gain.

That facelift for sport a spectacular success, Davidson and Regan turned their research elsewhere. That study centred on hockey with Murphy's help.

"As near as we can determine," Regan said a while ago, "It's by far the most profitable professional sport." He estimated the NHL market alone at $50 million.

They felt there was room at the top for another league; and that's partly how the WHA was conceived.

For the nominal sum of $25,000 all interested cities would be invited in.

With 12 franchises, that works out to $300,000, Davidson keeping one franchise for himself, in San Francisco, and Murphy doing likewise, in Los Angeles.

When a recent survey of the proposed franchises came out, each city was rated on ownership, arena size, hockey history, travel distances, local sports competition, etc.

San Francisco came up "poor" in the findings, and that's when Davidson got out. He sold the franchise to Quebec City. The price was $215,000 which works out to a quick book profit of $190,000; and whether the league gets all of that, or Davidson gets a slice, hasn't been revealed. But Davidson has an excellent talking point. Besides he's the boss.

Ratings Tell the Davidson Story

Murphy still has his franchise. The reason is simple. Los Angeles rates "fair". In the "excellent" class are Minnesota, Dayton, Winnipeg and New England. Calgary and Edmonton are "good-plus"; Chicago and New York "good", Miami "fair".

The WHA also has jumped into the lawsuit business as a get-established move. This is a throwback to the ABA. One frustrated WHA owner has filed a $33 million suit against the NHL for alleged monopolistic practices. There is another threat against the NHL for sneaking into what the WHA considered their territory — Long Island and Atlanta. The WHA considers this dirty pool, and illegal, and would dearly love to test the issue in the courts. And may do so.

Meanwhile, Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Players' Association, has expressed dismay at the sum of $250,000 being paid out in finder's fees. He says that leaves the WHA with only about $120,000 in cold cash. And as he is interested in the players, welfare, particularly some of those who might jump to the WHA, he wants to know where the rest is coming from.

Perhaps he should ask Davidson. He's come a long way from UCLA; and even the ABA. Or as he was quoted recently:

"The WHA is one of the smartest things I've done."

Is there any doubt? Before he came up with that $125,000 finders fee, his Quebec deal alone had to rate as "super".

And they haven't even dropped a puck yet!

Which one is the finest will be known about 10 tonight.

Braves and Bays clash head-on at 8:30 p.m. for the Island championship in the final game of the 22nd annual Vancouver Island tournament at University of Victoria gymnasium.

The teams have been locked in a year-long fight, which began last year when the Bays upset the league-champion Braves for the Island crown after finishing fourth in league play.

This season, Belmont nipped Oak Bay for the league crown.

Both teams proved worthy finalists Friday night, posting convincing victories in semi-final games, before about 1,000 fans, who crammed the UVic gym.

The Bays charged into an early lead and stayed at least 10 points in front all night to clip Victoria High Totems 52-43.

Braves survived a red-hot first-half performance by Reynolds Roadrunners then stormed to a 72-56 victory. The triumphs assured both clubs a trip to Vancouver for the provincial finals March 15-18.

"We're just happy to be going to the B.C. tournament no matter what happens now," beamed Oak Bay coach Don Horwood after his team played so well.

Mark Anderson, the Bays' six-foot roaming forward, turned in a standout game, scoring 21 points and hauling down 11 rebounds.

His shots were right on target all night and he was a sizzling 11-for-13 from the foul line.

Mark Campbell, who plays high post on the Bays' 1-3-1 offence, hit on five of six shots for 10 points. Sean Flynn had 10 points for Vic High, which trailed 28-13 at half time.

Centre Mike Finlayson and guard Leon Mitchell were remarkably accurate, potting 16 and 12 points in the first half as a running Reynolds team kept pace with Belmont and trailed by just two, 32-30 at the half.

Slick Jim Kupiak went to work for Belmont and scored 11 points in the third quarter as the Braves collected 22 points to open up a wide gap over the Runners, who suddenly turned cool.

Coach Wally Russell moved a taller Jim Merz on Finlayson and John Hunter on Mitchell in the second half. Merz held the six-two centre to six points and Hunter held Mitchell to five. Finlayson finished with 22 points and Mitchell 17.

Belmont's six-six centre Lee Edmonson scored his usual barrage of points and finished high scorer with 25 points.

"The kids' play on defence to shut them out in the second half was the key," said Russell.

Reynolds and Vic High meet tonight in the consolation final at 7 and the winner takes third place.

In Friday's consolation games, Jim Galloway scored 14 points to spark Nanaimo to a 43-37 victory over Campbell River and Wilf Ilmer netted 14 points as Courtenay knocked over Cowichan 41-26.

Courtenay and Nanaimo meet today at 5:30 and the victor, if not previously beaten by the winner of the Reynolds Vic High game, may challenge for the third Island berth in the provincial tournament.

The championship game will be followed by the presentation of the Times all-star trophies and outstanding player award.

Irate Cougars Rap Officials In 4-3 Loss

Regina Pats preserved their five-point hold on the Eastern Division lead in the Western Canada Hockey League, and an irate Victoria Cougar team suspects Friday's points were the gift contribution of hometown officiating.

Cougar coach Mitch Pechet and manager Eric Bishop both criticized officiating as the Pats rallied for a pair of third-period goals to edge Victoria 4-3 before 2,224 Regina fans.

Incensed over two third-period calls that swung the game in Regina's favor, Pechet had to be restrained three times from charging onto the ice for a confrontation with referee Wayne Kartusch.

Ahead 3-2 after rookie Al McLaren counted a power-play goal early in the third period, the Cougars were visibly shaken when Kartusch allowed a shot by Sid Prysunka to stand as Regina's tying goal.

JUDGE NOT CONSULTED

Prysunka's long slapshot was juggled by Darryl Fedorak, but the Victoria net-minder appeared to have made the save. Kartusch ruled otherwise.

Pechet had to be restrained from charging on the ice while as incensed Bishop criticized the referee "for not consulting with the goal judge."

The incident also cost Cougars a player. Murray Worley unwisely continued to berate Kartusch and was fagged with a misconduct that reduced Victoria's defensive corps to three.

That, too, had a telling effect. An overworked Murray Kennett lost the puck to Regina's Bill Bell, who scored the winning goal on a breakaway.

PLAY CALLED BACK

The Cougars appeared to have tied the score a few minutes later but the play was called back for an offside infraction. Again Pechet lost his cool, claiming the puck had been touched by a defender to nullify any offside.

It reamined 4-3, and the irate Pechet berated Kartusch at game's end and was prevented by some of his players from extending his rage beyond the verbal stage.

The incident marred an otherwise fine display by the Cougars, who also got goals from Gary Donaldson and Perry Robinson. Donaldson's gal was his 27th of the year and his 13th in the last seven games.

Smart 'Old Man of 60' Right Up With 'Kids'

MIAMI (AP) — "Where else but in golf can a 60-year-old man play with the kids?" asked Sam Snead, who hits that age May 27. "Maybe in billiards, where you can use a wheelchair.

"I'm playing smarter than I did 20 years ago, but get scared twice as quick. Putting jitters get me . . . if I only three-putt a couple of greens per round, I feel like Houdini."

Slammin' Sam, a marvelous physical specimen in his 40th year as a pro, shot a four-under-par 68 Friday to pull within one shot of leader Lee Trevino in the $150,000 Doral-Eastern Open.

Snead has 71-68—139 to Trevino's 69-69—138. Both Canadians entered were well back in the pack but made the halfway cut.

Ben Kern of Toronto, two strokes off the pace Thursday, rolled to a 76 for a 146 total while Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg just squeezed in at the 148 cutoff with a 77.

"Last time I won a tournament, Lee Trevino was hustling those Texas monkeys for two dollars a game," grinned Snead, referring back to the 1957 Greensboro Open. "What are my chances here? hmmmm well, I'd say I'm even money to walk four rounds without falling dead."

It was a banner day for the veterans in the second round with white-haired Paul Harney firing a 69 to tie Snead for second place, paunchy Bob Rosburg shooting 71 to stand fourth and Julius Boros plowing back into the running with a 70 on his 52nd birthday.

Canadians Tie Gold-Taking Reds

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (CP-AP) — Canada scored early and late Friday night for a 4-4 tie with the Soviet Union in the hockey tournament of the World University Games but could not prevent the Russians from clinching the gold medal. Canada wrapped up the silver and the United States has the bronze in the three-team event.

Gavin Kirk scored with six seconds left to give Canada the draw after the Russians had bounced back to overcome a 2-0 Canadian lead.

The Russians now have a 4-0-1 win-lost-tied record in the tournament, in which each team plays the other three times for a total of six games each.

Poland's Jan Bachleda dashed to the lead in the first of two runs in the men's giant slalom Friday as winter finally returned to the Games.

Temperatures plummeted and seven inches of snow fell early Friday to end the sloppy slopes and cross-country courses and a melting outdoor ice rink that forced the one-day postponement of Thursday's speed-skating races.

The new snow created further problems Friday, however. The start of the giant slalom event was delayed while the course on nearby Whiteface Mountain was packed down, causing officials to postpone the second run until today.

Thunderettes Reach Final

SASKATOON (CP) — University of British Columbia Thunderettes and University of New Brunswick Red Bloomers will meet tonight for the Canadian Intercollegiate Women's basketball title.

UBC beat Bishops University, 63-32, and the Red Bloomers edged Western Ontario, 57-52, in the semi-finals Friday night as the four conference champions met.

Weather Forces Curlers To Fly Great Circle Route

TORONTO (CP) — Bad weather in Newfoundland forced 20 competitors—five rinks—in the Canadian curling championship at St. John's to fly all the 1,275 miles back to Toronto Friday night after reaching Gander, Nfld., 160 miles short of their destination, officials among the 146 passengers reported today.

Five other rinks were reported stranded in Halifax and Montreal.

Worst off were the British Columbia curlers who left Vancouver at 9:15 a.m. Friday. After thousands of miles and 21 hours of peering at clouds, claiming and reclaiming baggage, they finally bedded down in a hotel near Toronto International Airport at 3:13 a.m. today.

Air Canada Flight 828's pilot out of Toronto told his passengers they'd have to land at Gander because of the fog over St. John's and travel the last 160 miles by bus.

But the plane couldn't land at Gander because of freezing rain and ice there and other Atlantic provinces major airports, so the pilot decided to try St. John's. Again he made an approach but was persuaded by air traffic control to go back to Montreal.

Montreal had fuel for the plane's near-empty tanks but no hotel accommodation. The curlers landed back at Toronto at 2:20 a.m.

When they may leave again is uncertain. Air Canada said planes at 8 a.m. were delayed at least three hours leaving for Halifax and poor weather conditions were predicted all day for Newfoundland.

Jamaican Soccer Ace Agrees to Join Regals

A 19-year-old Jamaican international soccer player who scored 60 goals — including six in one game — in 1970, has been acquired by Victoria Regals to play in the new Premier League this season.

He's Anthony Douglas, an international since he was 17. Regals have announced that Douglas has agreed to join the Regals but can't sing official papers until he gets clearance from the Trinidad Football Association.

Brian Hughes, manager-coach of the Regals who coached Douglas at a clinic in Jamaica last year, says he is quick and can play either striker or in mid-field.

Play in the Premier League is expected to open in early May.

MAJOR LEAGUES TO REAP RECORD RADIO-TV CROP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Major league baseball is to reap a record $41.1 million through sale of radio-TV broadcast rights for the 1972 season, figures compiled by Broadcasting Magazine show.

This is an increase of $734,000 over the total paid in 1971.

The broadcasting journal gave this breakdown:

- $10.6 million distributed among the American League clubs.
- $12.5 million split among the National League clubs.
- $18 million from NBC-TV to be divided among the 24 major league clubs for rights in the World Series, division playoffs, the all-star game and the Game-of-the-Week, shown each Saturday.

The magazine reports that the purchasers of the broadcasting rights are encouraged by the response from sponsors. It said that games of three non-pennant winners, New York Mets, California Angels and Chicago Cubs, were sold out to advertisers as early as last December.

Los Angeles Dodgers were reported at the top of the broadcast list with $1.8 million.

Pittsburgh Pirates, who won the 1971 World Series, were listed at the bottom in radio-TV revenue with $450,000.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Clearing way with pair of blockbusters in first two games, Dave Michell has captured men's tenpin award in 19th week of ninth annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Dave started with games of 230 and 255 before finishing with 181 effort for 666 series that topped tenpinners competing in league play and earned Michell berth in next month's Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

'Makes One Wonder About His Allegiance'

TORONTO (CP) — Gary L. Davidson, president of the World Hockey Association, said Friday night recent actions and statements by Alan Eagleson, executive-director of the National Hockey League Players' Association, have left him questioning the sincerity of the Toronto lawyer.

Davidson, in a telephone interview from Minneapolis, said: "Alan Eagleson has taken a position that is detrimental to the players he represents in the NHL, both personally as their attorney and as executive-director of their association."

Davidson was commenting on Eagleson's claims earlier this week that the WHA was operating on shallow financial backing after Davidson and Dennis Murphy, WHA executive vice-president, had split the $250,000 founding fees received from 10 franchises, four in Canada.

Davidson and Murphy retained franchises at San Francisco and Los Angeles respectively but Davidson subsequently sold his franchise to Quebec City interests for a reported $200,000.

The other Canadian franchises are in Edmonton, Calgary, Winnipeg and Ottawa.

Davidson suggested Eagleson, instead of rapping the WHA organization, "should be doing everything possible to provide them NHL players with two opportunities to play professional hockey, rather than one."

He also was "amazed" at Eagleson's "flip-flops of position."

"It makes one wonder about his true allegiance," said Davidson. "His timing is such that I'm inclined to believe he may have aspirations other than just being executive director of the players' association.

"As you know, Mr. Campbell (NHL president Clarence Campbell) is in his 70s and may be retiring in the near future."

Davidson said the recent actions are bearing out his thinking that Eagleson won't be of much assistance to the WHA and "consequently, I do not believe we should correspond, confide or disclose with or to Mr. Eagleson on any facts pertaining to our association."

Eagleson, informed here of Davidson's statement, said: "I am the lawyer for the players' association. I have advised the players to approach the WHA with caution because they have security with the NHL.

"They should be sure of their security with the WHA before moving."

Cubs Upset by Butlers; Buccaneers Blast Blues

Butler Brothers upset league-champion Victoria Cubs 3-2 Friday night to grab a 1-0 lead as the Vancouver Island Hockey League playoffs started at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

CFB Esquimalt Buccaneers trimmed Chemainus Blues 5-1 in the other best-of-three, semi-final series.

Jack Davidson scored two goals, including the winner, and Bill Westover scored once for Butlers, who took a 3-0 lead early in the second period.

Earl O'Hara and Rick Lapointe replied for the Cubs in the second period before Butlers tightened their defences to hold the junior club to just three shots on goalie Ed Hastings in the trird period.

Len Desjardins collected two goals and an assist for Buccaneers, who led 5-0 before Rick Adams rutned goalie Ray Chenier's shutout with just over a minute to play.

Chenier was a standout for Esquimalt, blocking 28 shots while clubmates Gary Lauder, Dave Stones and Rejean Beauchamp fired goals.

Bucs and Blues continues their series tonight at Chemainus while Butlers and the Cubs will resume their argument next Friday.

Cubs, however, will be involved in other playoff action this weekend. They tackle Port Alberni in Memorial Arena Sunday at 4:30 in the deciding game of a best-of-three Vanhouver Island junior "B" semi-final.

Steurer Avoids Disaster On Field-Reducing Course

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (AP) — French ski ace Florence Steurer won the World Cup women's slalom at Heavenly Valley Friday on a rutted, tough course of melting snow in which 33 of a field of 51 racers fell or were disqualified for missing gates.

Miss Steurer, in the battle for second place in the World Cup standings, posted a time of 45.56 seconds on the first run and 44.51 on the second for a winning total of 90.07. The first course had 57 gates, the second 58 on a run 2,850 feet long.

Second was Miss Steurer's French team-mate, Michelle Jacot, clocked at 91.15 seconds for the two runs.

American skiers took the next three places. Third, just three-hundredths of a second behind Miss Jacot, was Marilyn Cochran, 21, Richmond Vt., with 91.18. Fourth went to her Olympic - gold - medallist sister, Barbara, 20, with 91.58. Patty Boydstun of McCall, Idaho, was fifth in 92.40.

The race Friday saw the cream of women skiers, including favorite and double World Cup champion Annemarie Proell of Austria, crash to the snow. She was among eight of the first 15 racers who fell or disqualified.

Bitt Laforge of France, who started third and fell on the course, had to be helped to the bottom with a sprained left ankle.

CHUVALO SET FOR MEETING WITH ALI

TORONTO (CP) — George Chuvalo of Toronto, Canadian heavyweight boxing champion, signed Friday night to meet former world champion Muhammad Ali in Vancouver on May 1.

The contract called for Chuvalo to receive $65,000 for the 12-round fight. Ali has been guaranteed $200,000.

Playoff-Minded Golden Seals Start Reaping Trade Benefits

By The Canadian Press

The long-term payoff Charley Finley was looking for late in February when he dealt captain Carol Vadnais to Boston Bruins already is paying dividends to his California Golden Seals.

Battling for a playoff berth in the National Hockey League's West after spending last year in the cellar, the Seals came from one-goal deficits three times Friday night to hold Chicago Black Hawks to a 4-4 stalemate.

The tie enabled California to move alone into fourth place in the West, one point behind St. Louis Blues, one ahead of Philadelphia Flyers and two up on Pittsburgh Penguins in the division scramble for a playoff spot.

With California idle during weekend, the Blues, Flyers and Penguins have an opportunity to scramble the standings again tonight with St. Louis at Philadelphia and Pittsburgh Entertaining Minnesota North Stars.

THREE IN RETURN

Finley's critics, and there are many around the league who still look on the flamboyant Chicago insurance magnate as an interloper, suggested he traded away the one solid performer and Seals' leader when Vadnais went to Boston.

The Seals got three players in return, defenceman Rick Smith and winger Reg Leach from the Bruins along with minor league defenceman Bob Stewart.

Smith was the only one of the three who had been a regular with the Bruins while Leach, one of Boston's outstanding younger players, had been used primarily on their fourth line and saw most of his action in the third period.

Leach assisted Friday on goals by Joey Johnston and Gary Croteau that tied the score 2-2 and 3-3.

Stewart, a rugged performer, could be the darkhorse in the trade. He has shown a willingness to mix it with anybody in the league and was instrumental in starting the play that resulted in rookie Ivan Boldirev's 14th goal of the season that sent the Seals into a 4-3 lead early in the third period.

Off the ice, St. Louis Blues came up with a second brother act by acquiring right winger Kevin O'Shea on waivers from Buffalo Sabres. Kevin, 25, is a brother of centre Danny O'Shea, acquired from Chicago earlier this season.

The Plager brothers — Barclay, Bill and Bob—gave St. Louis its first family touch.

There will be a Victoria-up-Island final tonight at 7:30 as the Vancouver Island junior high school girls' basketball tournament concludes at Lansdowne Junior High School.

Visiting clubs earned the other semi-final spots as Theresa Marcin scored 15 points to spark Campbell River to a 31-25 win over Cedar Hill and Mt. Prevost of Duncan trimmed Colquitz 27-16.

Lansdowne stormed into a 22-6 half time lead enroute to their easy victory but Dunsmuir needed a second-half spurt to overcome a 14-6 deficit.

Dunsmuir met Lansdowne and Duncan took on Campbell River in semi-final games today.

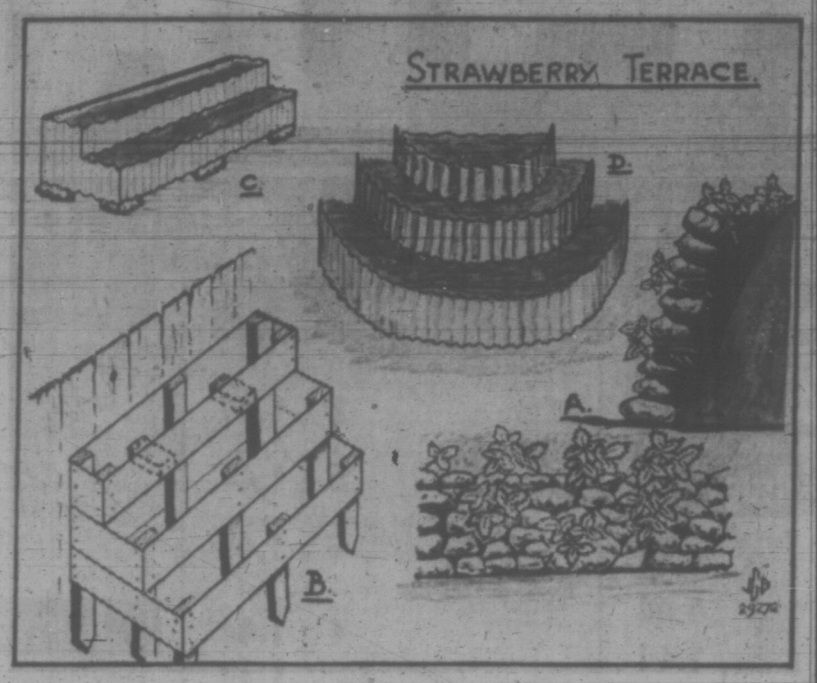
GARDENING
jack beastall

The strawberry terrace has been successfully used by generations of commercial growers in the hilly countries of Europe and Asia.

Loosely stacked rock is used to hold rich soil mixtures on steep slopes, the strawberry plants being set in holes and on the top surface as shown at A in the accompanying illustration.



A steep bank a few feet high, or a natural rock outcrop, an be made into a productive area in the home garden by adapting this idea.

No cement or mortar is needed. The rocks are firmly set into the soil with spaces between to allow the escape of excess water and permit air to enter for healthy growth of roots.

The holes are made large enough for planting after the wall is completed. In later years old plants can be pulled out, the soil at the hole replenished, and new plants set into place.

No every garden will have a bank or outcrop of rock, but the strawberry terrace is still practical with a little modification.

It can be made into a feature attraction for a sunny patio, or as a focal point at the end of a path through the vegetable plot.

The basic construction of a wooden terrace is shown at B. Each step 12 inches deep and 12 inches wide. The number of steps can be adjusted to suit the position it will occupy.

A three-step terrace will be 36 inches high, and this requires more soil and compost than one can spare from an average single lot garden.

Since 12 to 14 inches of soil is all that is needed, we can fill the bottom with flattened tin cans, scrap iron, broken brick and rocks, then place the mixture of soil and compost on top.

The design of a strawberry terace is limited only by the gardener's imagination, or lack of imagination.

A two-step terrace with a wooden base (drilled for drainage) and raised on rocks or wooden blocks (sketch C.) is suitable for a balcony, or an edging to a patio or sitting-out place.

Construction can be a wooden frame faced with corrugated plastic, or the plastic can be supported on old water pipe driven into the ground if the set up is to be permanent.

At D. we have a semi-circular or semi-eliptic design suitable for a feature against the house foundation or a fence. Or we can make a quarter-circle and place it in a corner.

The only factor determining placement of a strawberry terrace is sunshine. If we want luscious, sweet berries the terrace must be in a spot where sunshine is plentiful from early spring until the crop has been picked.

Since we have raised the soil level and placed it in a container we shall have to pay careful attention to watering. Without sufficient water a strawberry can be a flavorless, seedy fruit.

For a soil mixture we use a small amount of good garden soil mixed with a large quantity of compost; or old well rotted stable or barnyard manure. Avoid chicken and other bird manures because of their high nitrogen content.

Bonemeal can be added as the mixture is prepared. In future years the plant food (bonemeal in fall and a complete fertilizer in spring) is easily applied to each terrace.

Several benefits for the gardener will be apparent as this whole idea is considered.

Apart from space saving and ease of fruit picking, the problem of unwanted runners is almost eliminated, since they will be sticking out in full view waiting to be nipped off before finding a foothold.

The rocks in the wall, and the plastic or wood of the terrace structure will all be warmth-holding, thus encouraging good early growth in spring and hastening ripening of the fruits in early summer.

Being raised above the geteral soil level also means a gain of a few degrees of heat, thus avoiding late spring frost damage to open flowers which occurs when plants are at ground level.

Also noticeable should be the factor of the fruits being less accessible to slugs and birds — whose depredations are so often the cause of great wrath among home gardeners.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

If your soil is at all workable, sow outdoors the seed of hardy annuals for color patches where they are to grow: the old Scotch or Pot Marigold (Calendula), nigella, annual chrysanthemum, Night-scented stock. And sweet peas in a well prepared trench of old manure and rotted compost.

Indoors, start the tubers of begonias by placing two inches apart in box of damp peatmoss in temperature of 60 deg. F. and daylight. When rooted and sprouted, pot singly into compost and peat and keep in strong light and sunlight at no higher than 65 deg. F. until put outdoors by end of May.

Dahlia tubers should be checked for growth sprouts. If starting, cut clumps into sections each with a bud or two. Dust with sulphur or charcoal, set into flat of damp sand or peat to make a few roots and a bit of strong top growth. Keep them cool and in strong light to prevent spindling.

Mulch around young fruit trees to prevent drying of ground later. Washing soda, two pounds to 10 gallons water, to remove mossy growth on old fruit trees. Use gently with scrub brush or sacking.

Laos Fighting 'Deteriorating'

WASHINGTON (WP) — Fighting in Laos and Cambodia is increasing in intensity under "deteriorating" conditions even if the war is winding down in South Vietnam, a U.S. senate staff report warned this week.

Present U.S. policies offer "nothing but the prospect of more of the same, at higher cost," in these two nations, while U.S. troops continue to be withdrawn from South Vietnam, the report said.

As a result, the United States is becoming heavily reliant on Thailand "as a base for continuing war" in Indochina. To try to save Laos from a communist takeover, the United States is financing increasing numbers of Thai "irregulars" to fight in Laos, which has "circumvented" a legislative prohibition, the report says.

While the United States "continues to encourage Thai involvement in the Indochina war," Thailand's uneasiness about U.S. overtures toward China is arousing questions in Thailand about "the wisdom of greater involvement" in the conflict.

These findings were included in the summation of a report by a senate foreign relations subcommittee headed by Sen. Stuart Symington. The 94-page report itself, still classified secret, is awaiting security clearance by the Nixon administration. It is entitled "Thailand, Laos and Cambodia — January, 1972," based on field studies by staff investigators James Lowenstein and Richard Moose.

The report questions President Nixon's compliance with the legislative restrictions the senate has imposed on the level of warfare in Laos and Cambodia to forestall "another Vietnam," and the effectiveness of present U.S. policy.

News accounts have reported that 6,000 to 8,000 U.S.-financed Thai "irregulars," which critics call "mercenaries," are operating in Laos. The report again challenged the administration's definition of these troops as "local forces," exempt from legislative prohibitions on "third country" forces.

The summary said, in part:

"The military situation is currently worse in Laos than at any time since 1962, and worse than even in Cambodia. This is true despite the vast expenditures, despite the U.S. and South Vietnamese incursions into Cambodia, and despite the South Vietnamese invasion of Laos" last year.

In Laos and Cambodia, the investigators stated, they could find no plans other than "to continue to pursue the policies which thus far have served to intensify the destructive impact of the war, while failing to arrest the deteriorating military, political and economic situations in those two countries."

In Thailand, it is time to "put on a more candid basis" the real reasons for extensive military and economic aid, in place of the standard justification of combatting the "insurgency" threat.

PAY POOR, BENNETT URGES

If the people of Canada understood that equalization payments to provinces are being wasted, both Prime Minister Trudeau and Quebec Premier Bourassa would be defeated, Premier Bennett said Thursday.

Bennett also said he was disappointed to see federal finance minister, John Turner, a friend of his, extending the equalization system.

Bennett favors payments directly to poor people rather than to governments of poor provinces.

The current equalization program expires March 31 but Turner, in his new role as finance minister, announced it would be extended and increased for another five years.

A Choice?

A funeral is a highly personal event but families experiencing bereavement are today often confused about the choice of service that is available to them. People have been misled to believe that there are only two choices available to them — a high cost funeral of dignity, or a low cost service in which disposition is made in the quickest way.

Traditional funeral directors take into account the individuality of people and serve this individuality by making a variety of services available at a wide price range. We do not believe as do some of the new "societies" that everyone is alike. At Hayward's Funeral Chapel, we invite you to come in for a personalized consultation at no cost. There is no society membership fee required to obtain the type of service you wish.

Czar's Showcase City Now Quaint Remnant

By ROBERT G. KAISER

LENINGRAD (WP) — Peter the Great built this grand city in a Baltic swamp to give Russia a real European capital, something that could rival the great cities of the continent.

By local estimate, he succeeded. "Paris is a nocturne, but Leningrad is a symphony," a theatre director here announced the other night, as though there was no doubt about it.

One parisian who visited the city 133 years ago was not convinced. He was the Marquis de Custine, a remarkable figure who toured Russia in 1839 and wrote on it afterward in volumes reminiscent of the De Toqueville's on America.

"THEATRE SET"

"... A Greek city improvised for the Tartars as a theatre set," Custine wrote. "A decor, magnificent though without taste, to serve as the scene of a real and terrible drama — this is what one perceives at first glance in Petersburg." Leningrad's former name.

The truth in this dispute lies only in the eye of the beholder, of course. Custine lost no love on Russia, and had a special distaste for the czars who built this city as a "window on the West."

UNIQUE REMNANT

In any case, Leningrad is worth an argument. It is a stunning anomaly in Soviet Russia, a unique remnant of an opulent era theoretically overthrown in 1917. The physical memorials of czarist times which line every street are now carefully preserved, often at great expense, by a society that usually boasts of its rational materialism."

St. Petersburg was built to a scale of arbitrary grandness. The palaces and public buildings are huge. The private houses (which have been subdivided in modern times) must have been the biggest in Europe. The architecture was largely Greek-revival, a new style for Russia. All of this dwarfed the population (about 400,000) in Custine's day. "I count fewer men than columns in the squares of Petersburg," he wrote. Some 75 years later, in 1914, Karl Baedaker's guide to Russia reported:

"The streets of St. Petersburg are much less animated than those in other European capitals, though they are a little less dull on Sunday and holidays."

Today, the population is 4 million, and life on the streets is animated, though still duller than in Western Europe. It is life on a Soviet pattern. Beside one of the city's many canals, on both sides of a handsome old footbridge held up by two grand pairs of lions, citizens gather in an unofficial market place to bargain for housing.

One side of the canal is for swapping — by people who, for example, want to trade two single rooms in communal apartments for one two-room flat. Many post notices on two big, slanting trees to advertise their needs. On the other side of the canal a larger crowd is looking for rooms to rent — officially — from people with extra space (a rare breed).

FEWER CARS

There are fewer cars in Leningrad than in Moscow: By western standards traffic is light. Public transport is abundant and cheap — and usually crowded. Leningrad is a city of street cars, many of them driven by women.

The handsomest street in town, as Gogol noted in 1834, is the straight and broad Nevsky Prospect. "There is nothing finer than Nevsky Prospect," he wrote, "not in St. Petersburg at any rate."

It's still true. Nevsky is a real main street, lined with many fine buildings, and always full of a bustling collection of humanity. It's extremely well lit at night, and the food and wine shops stay open until 11 p.m. The jazziest electric billboard in Russia flashes scenes from new movies in line drawings formed by thousands of light bulbs for the entertainment of the strollers on Nevsky Prospect.

QUAINT VIEW

This avenue, like all of central Leningrad, is remarkable to a Moscow resident because it all seems so old, even quaint. The bulky, monotonous forms of modern Soviet architecture have been excluded from downtown Leningrad. Instead of destroying decrepit buildings, the government replaces their insides. One 19th-century building recently collapsed. It is being replaced by a copy of an 18th century structure.

The assiduous preservation of Old Petersburg in contemporary Leningrad also appears to be the work of people who want to hold on to something that was never really theirs.

Judge Rules Dad Not Boy's 'Friend'

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Mr. Justice Peter Wright of the Ontario Supreme Court Friday removed a boy's father as his "next friend" in a civil suit.

When Joseph Panzavecchia of London strenuously objected to an award of $1,500 granted to his 10-year-old son, Adam, Mr. Justice Wright, replaced Mr. Panzavecchia as the boy's "next friend" with an official guardian, yet to be appointed by the province.

In civil courts, persons under 18 years of age have no status and therefore must sue or be sued through a "next friend," an adult male, usually the father.

When there is no "next friend" available to represent a child's interest in the case, the court can appoint the official guardian, a government-appointed officer.

Adam suffered a concussion, fractures of the left foot and right hand and cuts when he was struck by a station wagon while riding his bicycle in June, 1969.

When Mr. Justice Wright made the award of $1,500, the senior Panzavecchia suggested the damages should be $4,500 or $5,000.

"I have many times advised you to get a solicitor," the judge told the father. "If you want to appeal from it, go get a lawyer."

PAINTER WINS FAME FOR UNSEEN SUBJECT

MOSCOW (AP) — Pyotr Vasilyev has spent 50 years doing portrait after portrait of a man he's never seen.

He has had to work from photographs and old newsreels, and now after hundreds of oil paintings and more than 3,000 pencil drawings, postage stamps and book illustrations, Vasilyev says "of course" he can reproduce Lenin's face from memory.

It would have been better if Lenin had sat for him at the time when their paths could have crossed, between the Bolshevik revolution and Lenin's death in 1924, when Vasilyev was 25 years old.

But when Lenin was alive, it was difficult to draw him.

"He just didn't allow it," the artist says.

"Lenin was a man of the greatest modesty. He disliked personal publicity."

Vasilyev was interviewed in a large room of the Lenin Museum where a special exhibit of his portraits was hung to mark the half-century since he committed his first bearded face of Lenin to canvas.

From the Lenin Museum you can ride the Lenin Subway to the Lenin Library, or out to Lenin Stadium to watch the football matches. Every Soviet town and city has at least one statue of Lenin. From lathe operators to customs agents, nearly everyone labors under his earnest gaze.

Few people have contributed more than Vasilyev to the proliferation of Lenin's image? His Lenins have been reproduced by the millions. He is a prominent exponent of the style of "socialist realism," and confesses bewilderment at modern painting. He depicts with firm stroke Lenins who look pretty much alike: clean-featured, sincere, determined but kindly.

There is Lenin drinking tea, talking on the telephone, addressing a crowd, reading a book, walking in the country, listening to the piano, stroking his goatee, striding through Petrograd or playing chess.

Vasilyev's proficiency and renown grew so that Stalin commissioned him in 1949 to do a series of drawings called "Lenin and Stalin."

The series, which pleased the dictator, earned Vasilyev the Stalin Prile, now referred to as the state prize. The drawings are in storage at the museum.

Among other works missing from the exhibit were those on display in 1913 foreign countries."

One of the paintings, called Lenin with a pencil, was given to Finland by Lenoid I. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist party. Vasilyev said. He explained the painting no longer belonged to him — he had sold it to the ministry of culture.

Russian Realty Bid Fails

LONDON (AP) — A labor-controlled borough council turned down a bid by the Soviet trade mission in London to stop a housing development and accused the Russians of acting like capitalists by claiming the development would drive down property values.

"We're more surprised that a socialist organization should express its views in such capitalistic terms," said the Labor-majority Camden borough council.

The argument began when the Soviet trade delegation feuded with the Sisters of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary, separated by a convent wall from Russian trade headquarters.

The 12 sisters of the St. Pelagias convent complained that Russian marital music from the mission blared over the convent wall. The nuns retaliated by turning up their volume on their recorded hymns.

NUNS SOLD OUT

The convent finally resolved the spat by selling out to private developers. The buyers panned a $3.9-million development for the 7½-acre site, including 50 houses and apartments.

The Russians objected and tried to get the borough council to refuse authorization. They said the development would intrude on their privacy and disrupt the neighborhood with construction noises.

$35,000 Target Set In Easter Seal Push

Greater Victoria Easter Seal Week begins Sunday with a target of $35,000 set for the Greater Victoria area.

At a special luncheon in the Century Inn Friday the press was given outlines of the campaign by Lions campaign chairman Austin Craven.

Among those attending were Hugh Curtis, mayor of Saanich and chairman of the Capital Regional Board, and Christine Paisley, Easter Seal "Tammy" for the second year in succession.

Craven outlined special events that will take place to focus attention on the campaign.

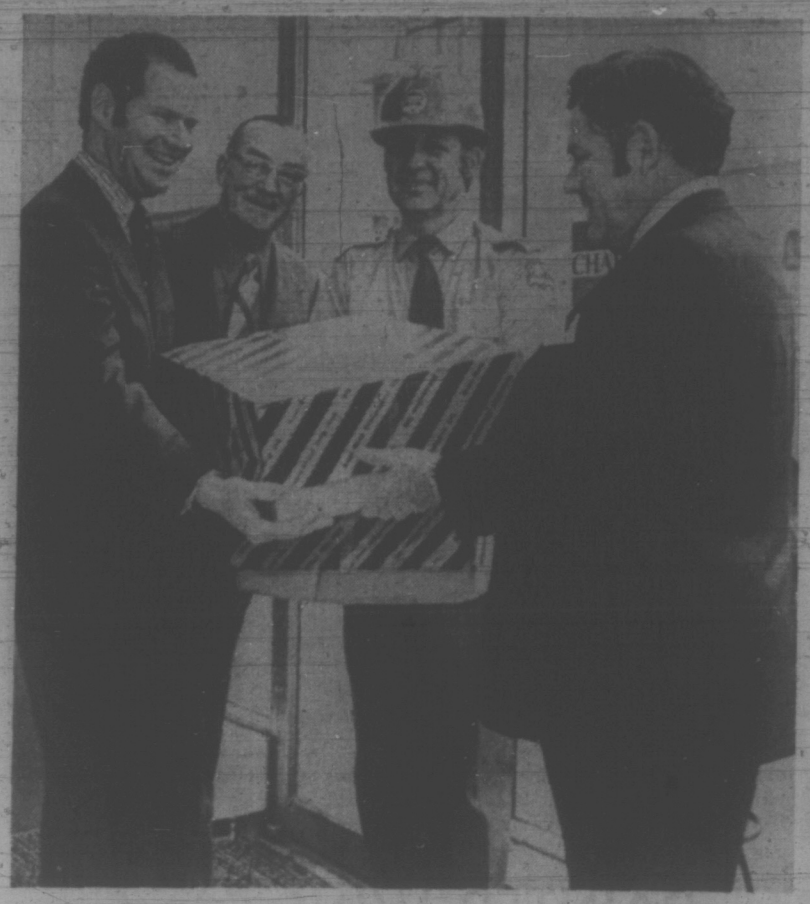
They include a 50-hour bowlathon at The Capital City Bowling Lanes beginning 9 p.m. Friday, an Easter egg hunt for handicapped children which will take place on the grounds of the Strawberry Vale Community Hall 2 p.m. Sunday, March 19, and an Easter Seal tag day, slated for March 25.

That evening an Easter Seal dance will be held in the gymnasium of Work Point Barracks, featuring The Big Band.

CJVI radio station will stage a talent show in the McPherson Playhouse Sunday, April 2 and will be calling for auditions Monday.

The society's assistant administrator, Ray St. Dennis, said that $473,000 would be needed for the society's province-wide budget. Twenty-five per cent of this amount, he hoped, would come from Easter Seal campaigns.

The society provides transportation for handicapped children and adults, summer camps and underwrites the cost of a clinic for children with cleft palates.



TWO BOXES of bonds delivered Friday by armored car to Nesbitt Thomson and Co. Ltd. represent the final act in Municipal Financing Authority's first public financing issue in Canada. Vice-president Phil Connell, right, of the investment house, accepts the order from MFA chairman Hugh Curtis, assisted by Loomis manager Stuart Simpson. Looking on is R. O. Gunning, Toronto Dominion Bank Manager, who deposited Nesbit Thomson's cheque for $5.822 million on behalf of 17 municipalities and regional districts who are using the funds for capital sewer or waterworks projects.

Bains Really Travelling, Approaches City Hall

Pacific travel business—in the next decade is expected to triple its level of the last 10 years, booking agent Kuldeep Bains reports.

To keep pace, he moves his office this weekend nine blocks closer to city hall, ending 21 years in his original location at 2630A Douglas. The old site is owned by Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, which has no immediate plan for development.

Bains International Travel Service Ltd. originally booked much surface travel, a situation reversed today when most sales are for airlines.

"The business I did in my first year I do in two or three weeks now," Bains said. He looks to stronger traffic destined for the Orient and Pacific islands, most of it for pleasure.

TOP PAY: $1.33 HOURLY

BRISBANE, Australia (Reuter) — Australian barmaids are fighting for a topless bonus. Union secretary John Murphy said:

"They're mugs to bare their breasts for $1.33 an hour."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 26-year-old man already serving 18 months in jail for possession of heroin pleaded guilty in provincial court Friday to one charge of false pretences involving more than $50 and another six counts involving lesser amounts.

Judge William Ostler sentenced John N. Fleming to one year on each of the charges, to run concurrent with the term already being served.

The offences involved worthless cheques cashed at city stores to support what Fleming called a "coming down" period from heroin addiction. His record included convictions for breaking, entering theft and escaping custody.

George Kosmos Essihos, 37, of 1120 Burdett, was fined a total of $500 and placed on one year's probation on charges of possession if marijuana and hashish.

"A foolish thing to do," said Albert Darly Larson, 19, of Ucluelet, as he pleaded guilty to throwing a pop bottle from his fifth-floor hotel room through a plate-glass window of Eaton's, 1150 Douglas, Friday morning.

Larson was fined $200 and ordered to pay for the $143 window.

A young woman who went on a pre-Christmas shoplifting spree pleaded guilty to stealing 34 items worth $100 from Woolco Dec. 20 and was fined $350 and placed on six months' probation.

Edith Antonio, 24, of 2834 Jacklin, took the items in a shopping-cart expedition last Jan. 20 over a two-hour period.

In traffic court, Judge E. F. N. Robinson fined George Cairns Hunter, 65, of 2725 Shelbourne, $300 and banned him from driving two months for driving with a blood-alcohol content of more than .08 Jan. 28. Hunter was involved in an accident in which damage totalled $650 at Tillicum and Craigflower.

William James Tennant, 20, of Sooke, was jailed for at least six months Friday after pleading guilty to stealing about $900 worth of goods from a Colwood house last December.

He was sentenced to six months definite and 12 months indeterminate by Judge M. L. T. Drake.

The burglary was committed on a Goldstream Avenue house Dec. 20 court was told. Among goods taken were stereo equipment, clothing, a bicycle and guns.

Lemieux Acquitted

MONTREAL (CP) — Raymond Lemieux was acquitted Friday of a charge of participating in a riot during a language demonstration in suburban St. Leonard in September, 1969.

A Court of Queen's Bench jury deliberated for more than six hours before bringing in the verdict.

It was Lemieux's sscond trial on the charge. His first trial ended in a hung jury last November.

Lemieux, 37, was charged after St. Leonard Mayor Leo Quellet was forced to read the Riot Act when a parade by some 3,000 supporters of French-only school instruction ran into a group of opponents.

Police testified during the two-week trial that about 20 persons were injured in the rock-throwing clash. Windows in 50 stores were also smashed.

Bored? Greenland Offers a Pleasant Variation

Agreed that Greenland is the biggest island in the world. Agreed that Greenland is a part of the Kingdom of Denmark.

But this does not necessarily mean it is as easy to travel around on Greenland as it is on Hans Christian Andersen's island of Funen or along the Danish Riviera from Copenhagen to Hamlet's town of Elsinore.

It is still rather complicated to move around on Greenland. Many places can only be reached by dog-sleigh or helicopter, even during the summer. Most of the fjords are frozen 9 months a year.

But that, of course, is what makes this island one of the most facinating places in the world to visit. With its unspoiled greatness and its unique scenery, it is well worth all the efforts.

Greenland is seven times larger than the British Isles about 840,000 square miles. The greater part of Greenland is north of the Arctic Circle. Along the coast there are granite mountains up to 12,247 feet high and behind them, in the interior, the immense Ice Age glacier masuring 708,290 sq. miles in area and up to 1.8 miles in thickness.

Even if no visa is required for entering Greenland and no fundamental permission is needed to go there (except for some military bases that are out of bounds), you should make detailed preparations before going as there are extremely few tourist accommodations available. In most cases you will have to sleep in dormitories or in modest private rooms, except for the two new hotels in Godthaab and Jacovshavn and the older ones in Sondre Stromfjord and Narssarssuaq. Advance reservations are therefore necessary. If you plan to travel on your own, write directly to the Ministry for Greenland, Hausergade 3, Copenhagen K, regarding local transportation and accommodations.

One of the world's most awesome sights — the breaking off of icebergs into the sea — can be seen by adventure-seekers this summer, through a selection of package tours that include charter flights from Copenhagen and ship cruises along Greenland's dramatic west coast.

From June through August, SAS charters will regularly depart the Danish capital taking tourists to western coastal Greenland cities such as Jacobshavn, Godthaab and Narssarssuaq, where they will board coastal steamers to watch the gigantic icebergs which have broken off the glaciers.

As one sails along the west coast, Greenland's inland ice cap rises behind the coastal mountains like a giant white back, barren and shimmering, the product of snowfalls since the dawn of time. Five-sixths of Greenland lines under a two-mile thick ice cap with never a thaw.

This vast mass of ice makes its way through the valleys and is out as glaciers into the fjords. There the edges break off — or calve — up to half a mile long and over 300 feet high. These are the icebergs which topple with a deafening crash, whipping up a giant tidal wave.

Here time has stood still. Jacobshavn Fjord, packed with floating icebergs of indescribable colors in summer, suggest the beginning of the world. The ice pushes out at 60 feet a day and sails south to meet with icebergs pushed out from glaciers in the south Greenland fjords.

Approaching Greenland by sea through the islands, one feels it is deserted. Only the screaming of a few birds breaks the stillness. Towns are few and look like doll houses against the base of a white wall.

When summer arrives, it thaws a brim of greenery around the ice cap and unlocks the frozen fjords. Since summers are short, plants luxuriate quickly, for night is light as day. Flowers and berries abound, and it's time for Greenlanders to, literally, make hay. Ancient crumbling farms and churches are wrapped in dandelions and reindeer peer from behind birch and alder.

Two new hotels, the White Falcon in Jakobshavn and the Gronland in Godthaab, the capital, make shore excursions a please these days. And a local helicopter line makes it easy to jump to distant towns such as Narssarssuaq, there fishermen still engage in primitive ways of hauling in their staple of life.

A jaunt into the interior reveals a scattering of hundreds of lakes and treeless rock landscapes. A little farther in, the foothills of the ice cap offer challenge for the summertime snow-hiker.

The original Greenlanders were the Eskimo people. In the tenth century, Eric the Red from Iceland settled in the land, and the Greenlander's culture to day, his mass media, books, songs and legends, are a pleasant blend of Eskimo, Indian and Danish. Greenlanders are mostly hunters and fishermen, but many are beginning to recognize the pleasure in developing tourism.

This summer, more Americans and Europeans will visit Greenland then ever before. Many will take an eight, 10 or 14 day charter from Copenhagen, with prices as low as $510. Others will fly from Iceland on trips from one to eight days, with prices as low as $75. In all cases, reservations ahead of time are a must.

Further information about visiting the largest island in the world is available through the Danish National Tourist Office, Scandinavia House, 505 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Toronto to Get Giant Jetport

TORONTO (CP) — Development of a giant jetport 30 miles northeast of here eventually will transform some lush Pickering Township farmland into an urban settlement and indirectly improve existing air facilities in Hamilton, London, Windsor, and Toronto.

The total bill could top $1 billion.

The go-ahead for the new airport on 18,000 acres was announced simultaneously Thursday by Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough in Toronto and federal Transport Minister Donald Jamieson in Ottawa.

It was not an easy decision.

Since 1968, the federal and provincial governments had studied 59 potential sites, all within a 50-mile radius of Toronto, and just recently, amid speculation where the new field would be located, the two governments settled minor differences and chose Pickering Township.

Ottawa will build the airport runways and terminal buildings and Ontario will develop peripheral areas, building hydro, water and sewage systems and rapid transport to move passengers to and from the jetport, expected to handle up to six million passengers a year when completed.

At a joint news conference late Thursday at Toronto International Airport, which will remain as hub of a new southern Ontario air facilities scheme, the two ministers said the eventual cost of the new jetport alone could reach $1 billion.

It will be in operation by late 1978 or early 1979.

SOME ANGERED

Air travellers, often irritated by congestion at Toronto International during peak periods, may be smiling at plans for the new jetport, but residents and officials near the site had different reactions.

Reeve John Williams of Pickering Township in an interview the decision is "absolutely disgusting."

"As far as I'm concerned," he said, the provincial and federal governments "can go whistle up a flute."

Mr. McKeough told the Ontario legislature the airport site, affecting at least 2,000 persons now residing within the 18,000 acres, will contain a new city of 15,000 acres with an ultimate population of about 200,000. He added there are about 1,600 properties on the 25,000 acres the province will acquire through expropriation, but he was not able to give a current population figure.

At the news conference, Mr. Jamieson said the cost of the first stage—two runways and a terminal—would be about $300 million.

He said it would be four or five months before land is purchased, and he did not expect ground to be broken until late 1973.

Airports at Hamilton, London and Windsor would be expanded beginning this year at an estimated cost of between $50 to $60 million.

The intention is to provide a more direct airline service to these three middle-sized cities where both international and charter flights could begin and terminate, Mr. Jamieson said.

Trudeaus' First Anniversary

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and his wife Margaret celebrated the first anniversary of their marriage Friday with the same quiet that marked the wedding itself a year ago in North Vancouver.

Mr. Trudeau was in the Commons as usual Friday but the anniversary wasn't referred to. Presumably Mrs. Trudeau was home "washing the dishes," as the prime minister has put it lightly at times in the last year.

Also at home—the prime minister's official residence at 24 Sussex Drive—was two-month-old Justin Trudeau, who was born on Christmas Day.

The Trudeaus didn't attend the national press ball Friday night.

Canada Will 'Adopt' Sask. Auto Insurance

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government's compulsory automobile insurance plan is the most advanced of its kind anywhere and eventually will be adopted across Canada, Attorney-General Roy Romanow said Friday.

"It is a matter of time," Romanow told 110 agents at the annual meeting of agents of the Saskatchewan Government Insurance Office.

Romanow, minister responsible for the crown corporation, also said the government does not care about the political affiliation of agents representing the SGIO.

"You have nothing to fear by adhering too individual political affiliations, whatever they may be and I can assure you that as long as agents are loyal and work in the best interests of the corporation, they will receive our full co-operation regardless of political affiliation," the minister "We do not require political regimentation."

Romanow said the automobile accident insurance act has been praised by Saskatchewan motorists, those most vitally concerned.

At the same time it has been criticized by self-interested insurance carriers, certain politicians and media "who don't believe in the principles of" the act.

He said the fact is that every Saskatchewan resident, car-owner or not, has been entitled to benefits if injured by a motor vehicle during the last 25 years.

Romanow said far-reaching improvements will be introduced to the act during the current legislature session which will substantially benefit any person injured in an automobile.

The government insurance office is a "people-run, people-based" organization which invests its reserves and surpluses in industrial development within the province.

Layoffs Protested

EDMONTON (CP) — There is no money available to keep the Edmonton public school board's caretakers employed but there is money available "to provide for them when they enter the welfare rolls," the Canadian Union of Public Employees said Friday.

The Edmonton local of the union which represents the board's janitors sent a letter to Premier Peter Lougheed protesting provincial restriction on school board budgets. The letter said the restriction has resulted in the layoff of 37 men and women and a reduction in the working hours of others.

'Pros Must Lead'

EDMONTON (CP) — The infringement by lay people in areas of educational issues and concerns must be resisted by professional educationists, Dr. John Hunt of Missoula, Mont., said Friday.

Dr. Hunt, speaking to 500 teachers attending the Central East teachers' convention, said the time has come for professional educationists "to take a stand on educational issues and concerns." He said the professionals must lead, not follow and they must act, not react, to someone else's actions.

Ombudsman Bill

REGINA (CP) — A bill to create the office of ombudsman in Saskatchewan was introduced in the legislature Thursday by Attorney-General Roy Romanow.

The bill says the ombudsman would be appointed for a five-year term and would be paid $25,000 a year plus travelling expenses. He could be suspended or removed from office before his term ended by an order-in-council issued on direction from the legislature.

Scouts Threatened

CALGARY (CP) — The birth control pill and urbanization are having an effect on membership in the Boy Scout movement, chief executive J. Percy Ross said Thursday.

Membership has been fairly constaht since 1970 at about 272,000, he said, and it could drop during the next five years because there will be relatively fewer boys of the minimum age of eight years.

Scale of Fines

REGINA (CP) — Motorists caught driving while impaired in Regina will know how much their fine will be before they get to court.

Judge Joseph Flynn said in court he will apply a $10-a-millilitre guideline to persons charged with having blood-alcohol content higher than .08 millilitres. The first motorist to appear before the judge had been caught driving while his blood-alcohol content was .22. He was fined $220 instead of the usual $100.

Infection Found

EDMONTON (CP) — About 200 cases of urinary tract infections have been discovered during tests given to 15,000 Edmonton girls, the Alberta chapter of the National Kidney Foundation announced today.

A spokesman for the group said about 150 of these girls would not have become aware of the infection until it reached later stages. The foundation says urinary tract infection is the early stage of kidney disease.

Future Weighed

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — City council Thursday night considered the future of his northern Manitoba city in the light of job reductions by International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd.

Alderman Ken McMaster, who took part in talks here this week with Inco officials said it was unfortunate that some businesses in the city had expanded too fast in the boom years. With an estimated 1,000 Inco jobs lost since last summer, mostly through layoffs, transfers and natural attrition, Ald. McMaster said some businesses find they are in real trouble now.

Lively Sessions Seen

By The Canadian Press

Lively sessions appear likely when the Quebec and Manitoba legislatures open next week.

Each province is beset with problems and Quebec's giant James Bay hydroelectric development project is being challenged by critics.

In Winnipeg, Premier Ed Schreyer said Friday there is no ill will between himself and former resources minister Sidney Green, 42, who resigned from the cabinet Thursday in opposition to state tax aid for separate schools.

The NDP premier intends to introduce a free-vote measure at the legislature session opening Thursday to provide tax aid to private schools, most of which are church-supported institutions.

Mr. Schreyer told a news conference there are no immediate plans to appoint a cabinet replacement for Mr. Green, who also held the urban affairs portfolio and was government house leader.

But they will debate the issue of support for separate schools because Mr. Gren says his views are probably shared by a majority within the party and the province.

SAYS IT'S BLOW

Manitoba Conservative Leader Sidney Spivak said the resignation was a "tremendous blow" to the government because Mr. Green "was without question the leader of the party in the legislature."

A major labor problem will confront the Quebec house when it assembles Tuesday. It is conducting contract talks with more than 200,000 civil servants who have threatened a general strike, which would include hospitals and schools.

On Thursday a vote on government salary offers, which could be taken as a strike vote, will be held.

The opposition may also ask for an emergency debate on unemployment.

On the James Bay project, critics say its costs are rising from the original estimated $6 billion figure to about $10 billion. They claim nuclear power plants would be less costly and produce power more cheaply.

Right-to-Strike Review Likely

By IAN PORTER
Canadian Press Labor Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — It appears certain the government, if re-elected, intends to make some changes in the legislation that gives public servants the right to strike.

The precise nature of the changes may be something of which even the cabinet remains unsure. Clearly, however, the main objective will be to reduce or eliminate the possibility of strikes by key groups of workers.

The desire is understandable even though only five contract disputes have ended in strikes in the five years since collective bargaining was instituted in the public service.

Four of the strikes—two by postal workers—attracted national attention and brought down the full weight of public opprobrium on both government and unions.

The criticism was particularly remorseless during the 11-day walkout in January by air traffic controllers and the three-week strike last month by electronic technicians at airport control towers.

RIGHT RESPECTED

In both cases, the government stuck by the Public Service Staff Relations Act, under which the workers were exercising their right to strike, despite demands that it end the walkouts with special legislation.

Apparently, the display of patience has won the government little praise from the public. Editorial demands for abolition of the right to strike by essential workers are stronger than ever.

Almost on cue, Stanley Little, president of the 153,000-member Canadian Union of Public Employees, charged this week that government bargaining tactics are designed to provoke strikes and set the stage for abolition of the right.

"By deliberately provoking strikes, treasury board is hoping Canadians will throw up their hands at more strikes in the public service and demand compulsory arbitration be enforced," Mr. Little said in a statement.

BOARD SILENT

Treasury board officials, of course, keep silent in public on what changes they would like to see in the act. They know too well how easily inflamed are the feelings of the unions they must deal with in their role as paymaster for 190,000 federal workers.

Undoubtedly there are strongly-held private feelings.

As the largest employer in the country, the board has never had an easy time in its effort to maintain some reasonable relationship among the pay scales negotiated with diverse and jostling groups of employees.

The job might easily become next to impossible. Under the act, each bargaining unit may choose between compulsory arbitration and the right to strike. As the union idea becomes established in the public service, the better-placed bargaining units are opting more and more for the test of strength.

The result has been the tendency towards confrontation which was admitted to exist by Treasury Board President C. M. Drury in the Commons Wednesday.

WON'T ACT HASTILY

Little purpose would be served by hasty changes in the legislation "in the next month or so," he said. But the government is endeavouring "to discover what is a better arrangement and how best it can be brought about."

The search dates back at least a year to the appointment of a three-man committee to study the effect of the legislation and to make recommendations to the government. Chairman of the committee was John Bryden, former deputy justice minister of New Brunswick.

The Bryden committee heard views from a large number of interested parties, including most public service unions, and submitted a report in June to then manpower minister Otto Lang. Recently it was passed on to Allan MacEachen, the minister newly responsible for the public service, but officials in his office claim he has had time only to skim through it, if that.

Whatever the fate of the Bryden report, it seems unlikely that the government can retreat too far from the original legislation.

To do so would be to reject the philosophy it has upheld ever since 1966—namely, that legal strikes are, in the end, less disruptive than illegal strikes.

It is a position that even Mr. Drury continues to support. Time and again he has reminded the public that legislation to make strikes illegal would not necessarily eliminate strikes.

Rescue Service Too Little, Too Late—Report

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Allegations that search and rescue facilities are too little — and often too late — in the case of marine disasters have been backed up in the findings of an official court of inquiry called for by the minister of transport.

The report backs up those who assert that weekend standby operations of rescue aircraft are inadequate.

The 181-page report and its recommendations stem from a court of inquiry into the sinking of the fishboat Enterprise and the ferry Patrick Morris off the Atlantic coast in April 1970.

Although the locale is different the conditions surrounding the disaster bear a painful similarity to marine tragedies on this coast.

SIX-HOUR DELAY

In his findings, court commissioner His Honor Judge P. Lloyd Soper notes that it was six hours after the first "Mayday" was received by the Rescue Co-ordination centre in Halifax before planes left for the scene.

Soper faults a system which allows such a delay, even though other vessels may be in the vicinity of ships in trouble. When the Enterprise sank, another fishboat, the Gulf Girl, was in the vicinity but couldn't spot survivors because of heavy seas.

The incident is parallel to one that occurred April 10, 1971, when John Donald Barber and Alexander Wilson of Vancouver drowned after their boat sank near Campbell River.

Although the disaster happened within 10 minutes of the Comox air base out of which rescue craft operate it was one hour and 15 minutes before a helicopter reached the scene. The reason — the disaster happened on a weekend and rescue craft are only fully manned during the working week.

MORE MANPOWER

In his recommendations Soper askd for "an increase in the number of personnel that will be available in shifts at search and rescue stations so that the reaction time may be reduced to a minimum on a 24-hours-a-day basis."

This is what the Campbell River council and other municipalities have been clamoring for on this coast. Their requests, to date, have resulted in no encouragement or constructive action from the minister.

In fact, one Ottawa department official wrote the Campbell River council suggesting that any increase of services was not warranted for "isolated incidents."

Soper also recommends that search and rescue aircraft and personnel on the Atlantic coast be relocated so that aircraft will be in a position to reach distress areas more quickly.

Here again, there is a parallel on Vancouver Island where with Victoria and Sidney being the most prolific areas for pleasure boaters, the nearest rescue aircraft are based 150 miles away at Comox.

In all such inquiries, called for under the Canada Shipping Act, the court is empowered to levy costs on owners of the vessels involved.

The Enterprise was owned by Chaleur Bay Fisheries Ltd. and the Patrick Morris, although operated and managed by the Canadian National Railway, belonged to the transport department.

Soper elected the minister of transport be assessed counsel fees of both the fishboat's owners and the CNR, because the findings of the investigation were "of public interest."

Soper states "revision is imperative" of the way in which inquires into shipping casualties are called.

Inquiries, he asserts, are limited because regulations direct that courts are asked to consider a set of questions without a general power to investigate related matters which, in their opinion, have a bearing on the matter.

"Indeed," Soper says, "the questions as presented are more suggestive of a search for a verdict, which, I am certain, the minister would not want to suggest."

RULES INADEQUATE

He points out the weakness of legislation that sets down that an inquiry be ordered by the minister of transport when the marine investigation division and other sections of this department may be involved.

Soper claims that such inquiries should be set up by the minister of justice.

The Patrick Morris sank on her way to look for survivors from the Enterprise. The inquiry round that the sinking was due to water pouring in after her stern door collapsed.

Regulations lay down minimum strength for stern doors of such vessels but do not cover the strength the fastenings should be. In the case of the Patrick Morris it was the fastenings that gave way under the pressure of the seas.

Another weakness in regulations discovered by the probe concerned the number of lifeboats required to be carried by commercial vessels.

The Patrick Morris met these regulations but a 40-degree list made it virtually impossible to lower boats from one side.

INSTRUCTION NEEDED

Soper's recommendation is that department of transport regulations be changed so that either side of a ship would carry lifeboats and liferafts sufficient for her crew and passenger capacity.

Other recommendations include:

— Skippers instruct crews in use of flares. It is often too late in emergencies to read the fine print for instructions.

— Inspection of liferafts be carried out with ship personnel present so that they become familiar with the launching routine.

JUDGE WON'T STICK IT TO 'EM

The court will not serve as a source of revenue, Judge E. F. N. Robinson declared Friday in refusing to levy a fine because an Oak Bay resident didn't have her 1972 licence plate stickers attached.

Hennie Nyhof, 2047 Kendal, was charged along with 69 other Oak Bay residents — with not displaying valid 1972 licence plate stickers as of midnight, March 1.

She appeared in Robinson's traffic court Friday, and could have expected to pay the statuatory $25 fine for the offence.

"I'm not going to be a party to making revenue for the municipality, and I'm going to suspend sentence in this case," Robinson said.

A $25 fine is the "indicated penalty" for the charge.

Mrs. Nyhof said she had bought the 1972 stickers for her car's licence plates, but had not affixed them.

She said she had the stickers in the house, and would have put them on before driving her car anywhere from its curb-side parking spot.

Oak Bay police issued 70 tickets on parked cars for not having 1972 stickers Wednesday. Mrs. Nyhof's car was tagged shortly after noon.

If all 70 car-owners had been ordered to pay the usual $25 fine, it would have meant $1,750 for the municipality's coffers.

Triple Volley Hits Gaglardi

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Spokesmen for the Capital Regional District delivered a double broadside at Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi today for saying there is no place for regional districts in delivering welfare services.

A third shot came from the chairman of a citizens' committee which studied local social services delivery for a year and a half. He said Gaglardi missed the main points in the committee's report.

"The minister did a complete reversal when the going got a little tough," said Saanich mayor Hugh Curtis who is chairman of the regional board.

"He can be depended upon for that sort of tactic."

Gaglardi "is blinded by a hatred of regional boards" and "shows an appalling lack of understanding" of the issue, said Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning, chairman of the regional board's health and social services committee.

ARGUMENT REJECTED

Gaglardi said Friday he does not buy the argument that welfare would be any more efficiently administered regionally than under the existing system.

Curtis said there are people within the provincial government at both elected and staff level who see the logic in regional proposals, have encouraged change and worked hard to bring it closer.

Gaglardi's latest outburst is "pure political expediency," the latest stage in a feud between Gaglardi and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

"Mr. Gaglardi is not likely to support something which Mr. Campbell is already supporting. I think if we understand that we understand the whole thing."

John Di Castri, local architect who led 10 citizen volunteers in an intensive study which produced the report, said one of the prime objectives was more efficient use of the welfare dollar.

Gaglardi appears to have missed key recommendations on how duplication and fragmentation of current services could be eliminated, he said.

Mrs. Gunning pointed out that in Greater Victoria the statutory social services program is now fragmented into four administrations — Victoria welfare, Saanich social services, the provincial government district offices and the Family and Children's Service.

It produces "an uneven and confusing pattern," she said.

"This is not only a wasteful and inefficient duplication, it is a perfect situation for buck-passing and that is just what happens — people needing help are passed around.

"In all other parts of the province except Vancouver and Victoria, the whole program is in each case under a single government agency."

'LIP SERVICE'

Mrs. Gunning said integration of the four agencies as recommended by the regional study would have permitted centralizing and streamlining of the income maintenance program.

It would have released social workers into the community to work more constructively toward prevention of problems and rehabilitation of individuals and families — "a principle to which Mr. Gaglardi pays lip service."

The regional taxpayer is carrying a crushing bill — over $18 million — for social services, said Mrs. Gunning.

Gaglardi said Friday regional boards are too powerful.

"That is the crux of the problem for him," said Mrs. Gunning.

REID (DEVELOPING)

'Answer Soon' Says the Mayor

Vancouver developer J. A. Reid wants some action from Victoria on his controversial waterfront highrise plans and Mayor Peter Pollen said today he'll get it soon.

Pollen said city aldermen plan a thorough review of the subject at a meeting Tuesday night "and we should be in a position to discuss the matter with Mr. Reid or his representatives shortly."

At issue is Reid's proposal to build highrise towers on his Wharf Street property below Bastion Square. The aesthetics and economics of the plan generated public arguments for months last year.

Reid said last November he would build a "seven-storey concrete box" on his property if his commercial-residential towers were not approved by March 1.

With the deadline past he said from Vancouver Friday: "I would like to hear from the city — and I mean soon."

Pollen's response was sweet reasonableness today.

"It's certainly not our intention to engage in any battle with Mr. Reid. Indeed, we're most anxious to accommodate him and encourage him to develop his property — in a reasonable manner, with utmost public access to the waterfront and in proper proportions."

Pollen said the city would be in touch with Reid shortly.

The True North Without Maple Sugar

TODAY WE CRACK SOME books, of which the first is a $6.50 paperback from McClelland and Stewart that can be expected to shake up the over-complacent reader.

"Making It: The Canadian Dream," has been compiled by professors Cy Gonick and Bryan Finnigan as a text for sociology students whom they would encourage "to become more open-minded, more tolerant of diversity in lifestyles, and at the same time more questioning on the conflicts within Canadian institutions."

But it deserves a wider-than-academic reading, and I recommend it to those who would know their country and its problems better.

Collaborators Gonick (economics, University of Manitoba) and Finnigan (Sociology, University of Lethbridge) contribute explanatory prefaces to a few gleanings they present. Their basic role, however, is that of coat-holders to the heated participants — and a widely-diversified crew they are.

Wilfred Pelletier, who tells of his childhood in an Indian village, sheds light on the Indian way in 10 pages which I hope will find a home in many a school.

A debate on federalism between Jean-Luc Pepin and Rene Levesque is more than a clash of Quebecois viewpoints: Two men who are well-equipped to argue their points offer their separate projections of our future.

(Pepin: "Two nations living in peace in the bosom of a single state." Levesque: Two independent states living as neighbors in economic association.)

These are only a couple of samplings from a 503-page collection that rattles the ribs of our Canadian society very shrewdly indeed.

For another here's a pitch by Bruce Kidd for vacation land use which goes far beyond the buying back of such lands from American owners who have been acquiring them in job lots.

Government, Kidd suggests, should subsidize outdoor holidays on publicly-owned tracts for the Canadian who can't afford to take himself and his family to a resort or even a provincial park.

"'Quality of life' is a favorite slogan of today's politician who has finally discovered that people want more out of life than simply a job," he states. "But so far, public recreation programs have added little to the lives of those who need enrichment the most — the working poor, the unemployed, the single parents and the disabled: in short, all those with little money and less mobility. We desperately need programs that meet the leisure needs of Canadians of all ages and incomes and that use Canadian resources."

In total, I regard the Finnigan-Gonick anthology as the most challenging job of work to come my way in a long time. If you read it, I expect you'll find yourself reacting to it much as I did — which is to say disagreeing at least as often as you agree with the views presented.

Perhaps the books' chief merit is that it de-simplifies out True North Strong and Free. We've come a long way from the dear old sugar-maple grove!

One cheery booklet that I welcome each year as a sign of springtime is The Farmers' Almanac with its compendium of wit, wisdom and assorted corn.

Along with other delights, this year's issue of the 155-year-old Almanac offers a parody of "The Old Oaken Bucket" from which I'll borrow a snatch . . .

"With what anguish of mind
I remember my childhood
Recalled in the light of knowledge since gained.
The mariarious farm, the wet, fungus-grown wild-
wood,
The chills then contracted
that since have remained;
The scum-covered duck pond, the pigsty close by
it,
The ditch where the sour-
smelling house drainage
fell,
The damp, shaded dwelling,
the foul barnyard nigh it—
And worse than all else was that terrible well.
And the old oaken bucket,
the mould-crusted bucket.
The moss-covered bucket
that hung in the well."

Not quite the sentimental song-poem penned by Samuel Woodworth in nostalgic mood, but the same as a finicky board of health might revamp it.

For a final book, here is Victorian Kelly Covin's "Hear That Train Blow," this time as a nicely-produced paperback from Dell Publishing Company of New York.

Hard-cover costing as it does, Covin's well researched documentary novel based on the infamous Scottsboro case should now command a much wider readership.

With two published novels to his credit, Covin is taking time out. I'm hoping that his next, when he gets around to it, will be a British Columbia-background piece.

Rent Increase Upsets Tenants

Notice of a $5 a month rent increase was sent to occupants of a large Victoria apartment block, which contains many retired people, just a few days after the provincial government announced a $50 a year grant to tenants over 65.

A Victoria Silver Threads spokesman today said that some of the older occupants of Beckley Manor, 548 Dallas Road, are upset over the increase but are "afraid to protest because they might be turned out."

She added that Beckley Manor is only one of others in the James Bay area which is raising rents.

Beckley, which has about 180 suites, has rents ranging from $130 a month on the lower floors to $235 on the top.

The manager, Walter Thorne, was unavailable for comment. Beckley Manor is owned by Westcott-Middlegate of North Vancouver, which also could not be reached.

Beckley: Going Up

Subsidy? Apply Monday

Persons over 65 who are eligible for the provincial government's proposed $50 grant for renters will be able to apply for the grant starting Monday.

G. S. Bryson, deputy minister of finance, said today application forms have been printed and will be available Monday. He said eligible persons can apply "anytime" after that.

Bryson also said no payments will be made until the legislature has passed the grant proposal.

Pigskin Saves Burn Victim family

WENDY DEY – EDITOR

TORONTO (CP) — Plastic surgeons at Scarborough General Hospital's burn unit are using pigskin almost exclusively as dressings for severely burned patients following the remarkable recovery of a Kapuskasing, Ont., woman treated according to the revolutionary new techique.

The technique was developed and is used extensively by the Brooke Army Medical Centre in San Antonio, Texas. Scarborough General's burn unit, rated of the best in Ontario, is the first to try it out in Canada.

25 Treated

Dr. Lloyd Carlsen, the hospital's senior plastic surgeon, said this week he has treated about 25 severely-burned patients with pigskin, notably Mrs. Rejean Rancourt, 29, of Kapuskasing.

The young mother took a smudge off her night gown last Sept. 19 with some cleaning fluid, then lit a cigarette. Her gown burst into flames and she suffered third-degree burns to almost 70 per cent of her body.

Since the accident more then 100 square feet of pigskin from specially raised pigs in the United States have been employed by surgeons in treating her injuries.

Generally, burns to 40 per cent of the body are considered fatal, especially if they are third-degree. In Mrs. Rancourt's case, doctors told relatives at first there was litttle hope, but she'll be going home this month.

Army Uses Them

Dr. Carlsen said pigskins have been used by U.S. Army hospitals for nearly three years.

"We've been using them for 18 months and we're the only hopsital in Canada doing so."

The plastic surgeon said the Brooke medical research team was attempting to find a substitute for homografts — where skin is taken from one person and grafted on to another — when it ran across pigskin.

Fewer Rejections

He said doctors refer autograft — moving skin from ine part of a patient's body to another — because of the rejection factor inherent in homografts. However, in cases like Mrs. Rancourt's the burns were so severe that she did not have enough skin left to cover the damaged areas.

The burn unit medical team too 12 skin grafts from her legs and shoulder, but there was not enough to cintinue. It took her longer and longer to generate new tissue — 10 days the first time and 19 days the second.

Encountering similar problems in its early efforts, the Broooke research team looked to animals as a source of possible heterografts. Dog's skin was a possibility but eventually was turned down because of the hair.

The researchers settled for pigs and the dressings now are commonly called porcine dressings. The Americans also developed a program where the pigs are raised in a sterile environment.

Because pigs have thick skins, several slices can be made from one site for heterografts. The dressings are sent in rolls in vacuum bottles to Scarborough General.

The dressings — about 12 one-thousandths of an inch thick — are "closer to natural coverage than gauze," Dr. Carlsen said, and permit the surgeons to leave porcine-covered burns exposed.

Finally Dies

If the pigskin dressing "takes" and grows to the patient's skin, it will be rejected when the blood supply is cut off. The grafted skin dies and sloughs off, much like a scab, without pain to the patient.

Dr. Carlsen said that porcine dressings are "not meant to replace autografts."

"Nothing is an alternative to a patient's own skin unless it is a twin's," he said. "Even in cases of third-degree burns, the graft must eventually be replaced by the patient's own skin."

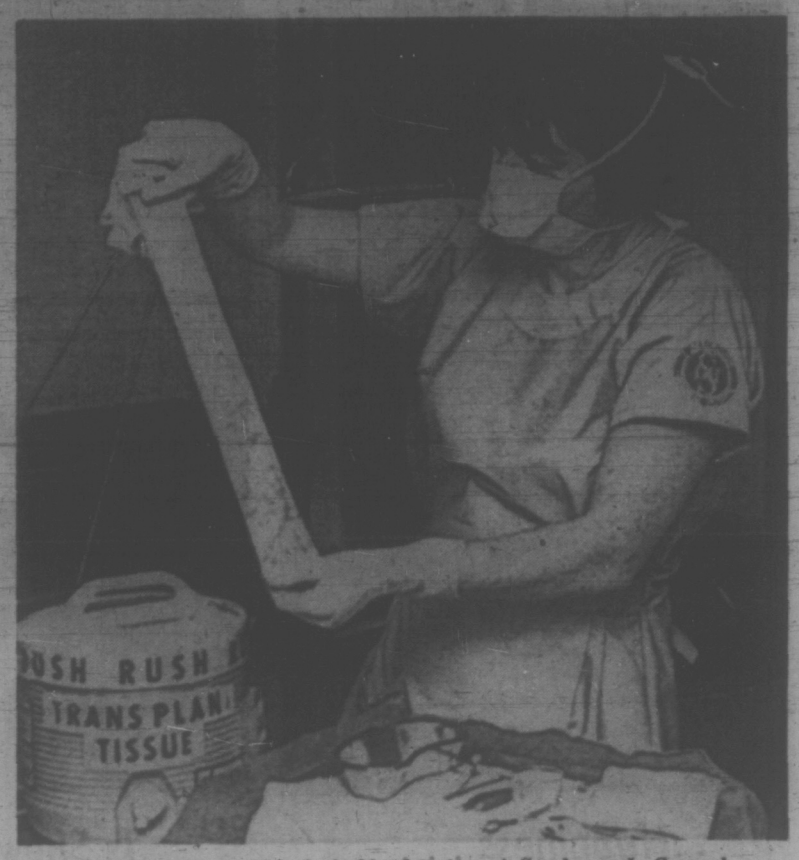
Cheaper Method

In addition to being less painful, the pigskin treatment also is cheaper than the traditional gauze-ointment-bandage treatment. The pigskin costs about $18 a roll.

In addition to use for treatment of burn patients, pigskin also has a practical application for skin donors. If a donor is patched up with gauze and ointmtnt, he can be in pain for weeks, said Dr. Carlsen.

"But if we use the porcine dressing there's no pain after 24 hours. If the pigskin takes, it just peels off in a matter of two weeks. It just makes being a donor that much more acceptable."

He concedes there may be people who find having pigskin applied to their bodies unacceptable, but "we haven't had any complaints."



Nurse prepares strip of pigskin dressing at Scarborough General.

Provincial Laws Chain New Day Care Centre

The director of a chain of day care centres would like to open a branch in Victoria or Vancouver if he can persuade the provincial government to change existing child care regulations.

John Christianson, director of Mini-Skools, a public company operating day care centres in Toronto and Winnipeg, would like to build a centre that would accommodate 150 to 200 children.

Present B.C. regulations permit a maximum of 75 children in any one centre and all must be at least three years of age.

Christianson says regulations also prohibit more than one program in any one setting.

"We want to offer more than one program in the building," he said.

He said three of the five Mini-Skool centres located in Toronto care for babies from six weeks of age. 500 children are enrolled in Toronto centres and the company is building facilities for another 260.

Christianson says basic costs for day care are much the same for large or small centres. A larger enrolment means the owners can afford to include swimming pools and gyms.

"We can't afford to build a swimming pool for 75 children," Christianson said. He pointed out that although more children attend his centres they are separated into small groups according to age and length of time they spend at school.

Cost is $86 per month in Winnipeg for all-day care five days a week.

Although his centres are large, buildings are designed so that children feel at home.

"Classrooms open on to the playground so that children aren't confused or frightened by long corridors," Christianson said.

Furniture is scaled to the small child. "The only adult-size chairs in the school are the rocking chairs in each classroom," Christianson said.

Limelight Pales On UN's First Lady

NEW YORK (UPI) — The "First Lady" of the United Nations is a cheerful, forceful woman, who is not one to complain.

"It was his choice and I decided immediately that I would never complain," Mrs. Kurt Waldheim said in an interview. "I'm very happy."

The slim, dark-haired wife of the United Nations Secretary General sounded as enthusiastic as any wife could about the great honor that came to her husband. Kurt Waldheim, Austria's chief UN delegate, took over the duties of secretary general in January.

Since then Elizabeth Waldheim, 49, has been "trying as hard as I can" to deal with the responsibilities of her position and ease the burden of her husband. "I've seen very little of him since he began his work," she said.

Parties Intrude

"I want to be helpful by taking care of little things — like letters, phone calls and visits when he can't go himself," Mrs. Waldheim said. However she admits she does not like cocktail parties which are bound to intrude continually into her schedule.

Already there is a mountain of mail, congratulations from all over the world, all of which Mrs. Waldheim is busy answering.

"When my husband became foreign minister, we received many letters from friends in Austria," the Vienna-born first lady of the UN recalled. "But this time the letters come from many countries, from people we don't even know. It's very sweet."

One of Mrs. Waldheim's objectives is to see that her husband gets some rest occasionally.

There is a "hotline" from the Waldheim home to the inner office of the secretary general, often regular phones in both places are so busy they cannot consult one another.

"Sometimes in the evening I call him and say 'maybe in a half an hour you will be able to come home for dinner?'" she said.

"I'm determined to make Kurt take some holidays," Mrs. Waldheim said. A ski weekend in New Hampshire was on her mind.

The whole family skis. "My son is a very good skier," Mrs. Waldheim said, speaking of Herson Gerhardt, 23, who is graduating in law from the University of Vienna, where Mrs. Waldheim earned her own law degree. The Waldheims met at that university, they married in April of 1944.

Skiing Holiday

The eldest daughter, Liselotte, 26, works in Geneva for the United Nations narcotics and drug division. Liselotte was born in a farmhouse during the bombing of Vienna. Mrs. Waldheim walked up a mountain road to the farmhouse where her mother helped her with the birth. The baby was three days old before the father was able to join them.

The youngest child Christa, 12, lives with her parents in their apartment overlooking Central Park on New York's Fifth Avenue. "Unfortunately, you can't hold on to children," Mrs. Waldheim said.

In any spare time Mrs. Waldheim finds, she reads. She is fluent in English and French as well as German.

"We have newspapers from all over the world around the house," she said, "so I don't read as many books as I'd like."

Lysol Claims Questioned by FTC

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal Trade Commission alleges that advertisements about Lysol brand disinfectants create the false impression that the products can prevent colds and flu.

Lysol's manufacturer, Sterling Drug Inc., disputed the finding in a statement Thursday that said "The advertising cliams for Lysol brand disinfectants which the Federal Trade Commission is challenging in its proposed complaint are accurate and truthful."

The FTC said the claims made by Lysol that it kills flu virus on household surfaces such as sinks, tiles and pails are true, but that the ads also imply that this helps reduce colds.

The FTC suid the flu virus is usually spread through the air, rarely by surface contact.

The FTC in a proposed consent order asked Lysol to stop the advertisements and to include "clearly and conspicuously" in all its advertising for one year the following statement:

"Contrary to our prior advertising representations, the use of Lysol brand disinfectants in the home will not have significant medical benefit in reducing the incidence of preventing the spread of colds, influenza or other upper respiratory diseases."

Robert Petofsky, director of the commission's bureau of consumer protection, said in the Lysol advertisements "the literal truth has the effect of deceiving."

Daughters of Lib Vital

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — The real effect of women's lib, Dr. Jean Lipman-Blumen believes, is probably a generation away — when the daughters of today's liberated women get married.

The reason: One of the strongest determinants of a woman's values and behavior is a sex role ideology formed in childhood by the relationship between her parents.

Dr. Lipman-Blumen, a sociology researcher at Stanford University and mother of three, came to that conclusion after a study of aspirations, marriage roles and backgrounds of 1,012 wives of graduate students in the Boston area.

Her findings, recently published in Scientific American, indicates that women's behavior is silently and subconsciously guided by "powerful systems of beliefs" about the appropriate roles for a female.

These beliefs, usually acquired during early childhood, begin to manifest themselves in adolescence. They ultimately determine the woman's aspirations and her view of her marriage role.

The sociologist grouped subjects' ideologies into two categories . . "contemporary" and "traditional"

"An oversimplified version of the traditional ideology is the belief that under ordinary circumstances women belong in the home, caring for children and carrying out domestic duties, whereas men are responsible for the financial support of the family," she said in an interview.

"The contemporary ideology holds that the relationship between men and women are ideally egalitarian and that husbands and wives may share domestic, child-rearing and financial responsibilities."

Her study of college-educated women, showed 27 per cent were traditional and 73 per cent contemporary.

Mrs. Lipman-Blumen found that parents' income, education or occupation, childhood religion, broken homes, and urban vs. rural background had no significant bearing on sex role ideology.

The Retirement Years —Plan for Them Now

By DAVID MAY
Times Staff

How can you prepare for the day when you retire?

For many, the question may appear academic. Retirement, they argue, is strictly for the 65-year-old, the infirm or the suddenly wealthy. If none of these categories applies the question is usually shelved "to a later date."

But the picture is changing. A 1969 Capital Region Planning Board report — Retirement in the Capital Region — noted that, although a minimum of eight per cent of retired people are under 65, the bulk of these are over 55. The report goes on to say that "this group can be expected to increase in number proportionately as retirement ages decrease throughout society."

The retired class is getting younger. It's also getting healthier. Victoria's climate and environment has always been a drawing card for the retired from other parts of Canada. (More than half the report's retired gave these factors as reasons for moving here.) Add to this improved medical facilities and better drugs and the result is a longer-lived, sooner retired person.

Mrs. C. D. Stringfellow, counsellor at the Victoria branch of Silver Threads, says wide variations in the background of the potential retired person make it difficult to recommend any one time to begin preparations. In many cases, she says, the decision in favor of counselling is made by the person's family, not by the person himself.

Psychologically, the retiree may have surrendered the initiative right from the start by letting his family "take care of the problem."

But it needn't happen this way. Mrs. Stringfellow's counselling services embrace all aspects of life, from the finding of suitable accommodation to financial assistance where pensions become overstretched. She also co-ordinates assistance on legal matters, real estate and medical queries. There is also aid in locating live-in housekeepers.

"Some of our people are quite rich," says Mrs. Stringfellow. "Not many but some."

Rich or otherwise, Mrs. Stringfellow's clients are all potential victims of one fate—loneliness. Silver Threads pays regular visits to shut-ins. Others receive a daily telephone call to keep them in touch.

"A person has got to have some reason for getting up in the morning," says Mrs. Stringfellow. Even if it's only for a phone call.

Different World

Jack and Hilda Beastall's world is a far cry from the one described above.

Now 64, Jack is phasing out the plant nursery that he and his wife have run for 30 years. But his work is far from over. This week, he completed his 1,182nd open line radio show on gardening, wrote and illustrated his weekend column for The Times, did his daily volunteer weather reports and answered innumerable queries on all aspects of the garden.

His wife Hilda, 65, writes a daily gardening column for this newspaper, is classifying lists of poisonous plants and takes a keen interest in the garden as a source of nutritious home grown food.

Both are up each day by 6 a.m.

"When you've got a deadline to meet, that gets you up," says Jack. The Beastalls have never used an alarm clock.

All their activities, says Jack, reflect interests held since childhood.

Rejects Novelty

"When you get to 60 and over, you find it harder to accept something that is entirely new. Sometimes, in fact, your mind will react violently against novelty," he says.

"We hear many of our friends talking about devoting themselves entirely to their gardens once they reach retirement," says Jack. "What they forget is, they may not be physically capable of doing this at 65."

As a gardener, he recommends 40 as the best age to begin planning for eventual retirement. It takes 10 years for a planned garden to settle in, and another decade for the gardener to fit himself to the garden.

Physical adaptability is an important factor in any retirement, the Beastalls say. Hilda is glad she doesn't have the rushing around the nursery to do any more. Jack, fascinated by electricity, admits that poor eyesight and stiff fingers puts such delicate tasks as soldering beyond his reach.

But there's no regret.

"Do what you can, with what you have, where you are today," reads a moto in the Beastall home. Jack and Hilda live by that advice.

Not everyone may have such a clearly thought out path to pursue as the Beastalls. Help, in the form of a college preparation course for retirement, may figure in the future curriculum at Camosun College.

Plans are still in the discussion stage, says Alan Batey, Camosun's director of community services, who sees the possibility of courses directed towards those working with the elderly as well as the retired-to-be.

Batey said it's still too early to speculate on the structure of the course (this week saw the initial meeting of representatives of hospitals, social workers, extended care and Silver Threads at the college) but some preparatory course seems likely to emerge this fall.

Loneliness and economics stalk the retired, according to Mrs. Bobbi Etter, assistant co-ordinator of Victoria's Crisis Line. She notes that calls from the retired complaining of loneliness rise in volume at the end of the month before the pension cheque turns up. Often complaints of isolation turn out to have a lack of money base.

The Crisis Centre doesn't give "advice" but will try to offer alterntives to the elderly. The most frequent place of referral is the Silver Threads organization or the James Bay drop-in centre, run under the local initiatives program.

Cultivation of friends, the development of a hobby to take the place of work, and freedom from personal indebtedness seem to be the general goals the retired person of the future should aim towards. Beyond these practical aspects, there lies the important field of mental readjustment for which it is impossible to generalize.

Are You Married to an Alcoholic?

Women attending a conference on drugs, alcohol and tobacco in Victoria this weekend are being asked to fill in forms that indicate whether or not their husbands are alcoholics.

The conference, which started Friday, continues tonight at First United Church, 932 Balmoral at 7:30 p.m. Sponsors are the Greater Victoria Alcohol Association and the Drug, Alcohol and Tobacco Association of Victoria.

The form was prepared by Reg Clarkson, of the Victoria Self-Help Society, from questions suggested by wives of alcoholics.

According to Clarkson, it takes an average of 10 years for most wives to realize they are married to alcoholics. The form aims at helping wives identify the problem early in marriage so they can decide to either live with it or seek divorce before children are involved.

Questions need a simple yes or no. Three yes answers out of 45 indicate the husband is an alcoholic.

Clarkson says wives who realize their husbands are alcoholic during the first few years of marriage usually seek a divorce.

"Eight years seems to be the cut-off point," he said. "After that time wives have too many commitments and are too emotionally upset to start a new life."

BIP Followers Criticize Plan As Expensive

Women who signed up for the Josephine Lowman Beauty Improvement Plan, which started in this newspaper Jan. 17 and ended Monday, lost an average 12 pounds during the eight-week program, according to a Times survey.

If all 325 local women, who wrote in requesting the Beauty Improvement Plan booklet, lost this amount, it adds up to an impressive 3,900 pounds — almost two tons.

Not quite as good a result as the 20-pound loss promised in the plan, but most women admitted they "cheated a bit."

Several women criticized this year's diet menus for including hard to find items and being too expensive.

One caller, who thought the plan was a local column, said: "The least you could do is tell us where to buy required foods."

She had spent the afternoon in a fruitless search for nectarines.

Mrs. Michael Podgorenko is one of the housewives who thought the plan was too expensive.

"Last year, menus stayed within the limit of everyday food," she said. Mrs. Podgorenko says quite a few of her friends agreed that cost per meal was "way out of reach."

Another dieter, Mrs. Robert Barker, follows the plan every year. But she found it difficult to stick to the diet this time round.

"I didn't like the menus," she said. "They called for fish too often and had other things I don't like, such as yogurt and cottage cheese."

Mrs. Barker followed the plan faithfully for two weeks and then gradually lost interest.

"I might have stuck to it if the BIP booklet had come," she said.

Many women called to complain that booklets ordered had still not arrived by the end of the eight-week course.

Mrs. J. D. Reeves, however describes the plan as "excellent — if you follow it."

"All the essential fooods needed for good nutrition are included," Mrs. Reeves said.

She described exercises as "good and not too strenuous."

Saddest report was turned in by a young mother. She gave up because when she did the exercises during the day her children laughed at her and when she did them at night her husband did the same.

Birth Control Measures Include Abortion: Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — Many delegates didn't like it, but the first national family planning conference which took place here this week decided that abortion should be included among birth control measures.

By a vote of 70 to 62, delegates decided to leave the word abortion in a composite recommendation that "family planning policy, programs and services should encompass the full range of birth control methods, sterilization, vasectomy and tubal ligation, abortion, fertility and genetics.

Many seemed annoyed at being placed in judgment on abortion because federal organizers had told them the conference was not concerned with the issue.

However some delegates, including a number of prominent physicians, argued that an all-encompassing discussion on family planning couldn't exclude abortion, even if it were regarded as a last-resort measure in exceptional cases.

While the recommendation carried, the conference also decided the vote will be officially noted.

This was one of 22 recommendations approved after four days of discussions. If accepted, even in part by the sponsoring federal government, they will require a massive outlay of funds.

The federal health department organized the conference and invited representatives of government, social agencies, voluntary groups and community associations — to spend four days discussing what should be done in the family planning field.

The press was excluded from many of the discussions which frequently, and ironically, dealt with the need to make greater use of the media more in telling Canadians about family planning services.

Trials Before Altar

DEAR ABBY: First a young college couple wrote saying they had become fond of the clergyman in their little college town church. They said they wanted him to marry them in the bride's hometown church but her parents felt it would be a slap in the face to the hometown minister.

You said, "It's your wedding and you should have the right to do it your way."

A minister wrote in and said, "It appears that you are telling the girl to ignore her hometown pastor and have another man come into his church to perform the service. This is just not done."

Then you backed off suggesting a compromise: "Have both ministers, and let them share the service."

Sorry, Abby, but you should have stuck to your guns. The church is a house of God and not the property of a man so schooled in dispensing God's will that he has completely forgotten his mortal place, and has become to believe that he is God.

If a minister has to put an embargo on the use of a church building in order to get people into it, then surely God does not dwell there.

He should be thankful the bride wants to get married in a church when today so many marriage ceremonies are being performed in national parks, secluded canyons and elsewhere.—L.W.

DEAR L.W. And some don't want marriage ceremonies period! Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: My thanks to you for your open-minded response to "Disgusted with You" — the zealot writer who condemned you for sanctioning the right of free belief.

I once read that more blood has been shed in defence of the Bible than in defence of any other singular instrument of "peace." I become more convinced daily that it is true.

As the daughter of an Episcopal bishop, and as one who is more and more dismayed daily by the cruelty and criticism that so many "Christians" level upon one another, I look to you and those like you for the courage and encouragement I need to become as giving, loving and sympathetic as He, who founded Christianity was.

The ultimate goal is beyond my grasp, but you, and other sincere Christians make it all seem worth striving for.

Please print this. You are certainly due one credit for every criticism. In admiration.—Elizabeth Hargrave Brown, Satellite Beach, Fla.

DEAR ABBY: Somebody handed me a gift, and I said, "Thank you very much." I was later criticized because I didn't go home and write that person a thank-you note.

Abby, I am a 62-year-old lady and this is the first time I ever heard that you are supposed to send a written thank you for a present somebody hands you in person. I said "Thank you" when I got it. Wasn't that enough?—Lots to Learn.

DEAR LOTS: Even after verbal thanks are expressed, it's considered an especially gracious gesture to send a written note of thanks, but it's not absolutely necessary.

Hydro Park and Ride Systems Draws 200

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro's park-and-ride bus system went into operation Friday and didn't make much of a dent in downtown traffic.

But Ald. Art Phillips of Vancouver and B.C. Hydro officials observing the start of the new system said they are confident it will work.

Under the plan, commuters park their cars without charge in a parking lot on the city's east side and then board buses for a 25-cent ride downtown.

About 200 people took advantage of the park-and-ride plan and Phillips said the city feels if 200 people used the shuttle system "we have a good indicator that the system will work."

"It will take a month or so for people to change their parking habits," he said.

Issue 'Dangerous'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bilingualism would be a dangerous issue for the next federal election, the secretary-general of the Federation of Franco Columbians said here.

If it does become a major campaign issue it could well lead to the division of Canada "into two republics," Romeo Paquette said in an interview.

Tour Facilities

VANCOUVER (CP) — Triumf, the $27 million nuclear accelerator being built at the University of British Columbia, will have a variety of applications in the medical, pollution and crime detection fields, Science Minister Alastair Gillespie was told.

Gillespie, touring major science facilities, visited the huge accelerator and later toured the Pisces IV submersible.

Harsh Words

VANCOUVER (CP) — Harsh words were exchanged between a member of Parliament involved in the Opportunities for Youth Program and a Vancouver alderman who was severely critical of the program.

Ald. Harry Rankin said the program is no more than a sop and a bribe offered by a government that hasn't been able to solve the problem of youth unemployment.

Hugh Faulkner, MP, speaking with Rankin at a forum organized by the Citizens Council for Civic Development, accused the alderman of talking "patent nonsense."

'Waste of Time'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Changes in legislation that would require school boards to hold operating referendums even if the taxpayers fail to demand them would result in needless waste of time and money, says Jack Smedley, president of the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

An amendment to the Public Schools Act introduced this week in the legislature would force all school boards who budget over the limit set by the government finance formula to automatically seek taxpayer approval in a referendum for the excess spending.

Kalamalka Study

KELOWNA (CP) — A study of the Kalamalka water basin by the B.C. Water Rights Branch is to begin immediately. The comprehensive study will include ground water, runoff, and ecological conditions.

DON'T BUY EASTER DUCK —RENT ONE

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Charlotte Nature Museum will rent out baby ducks for the Easter holidays at $2.50 each.

When the ducks are six weeks old, the renters must turn them loose on a lake in the area or return them to the museum.

Officials say the purpose is to raise money for the museum, increase the duck population of the area and provide an Easter pet without any subsequent disposal problems.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Faith Has No Proof Until It's Under Way

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Celia, the heroine of Pamela Hansford Johnson's novel, The Last Resort, finds herself caught in a web of distressing circumstances. Unmarried and approaching life's middle years, Celia has had a rather idle life with her fussy, whiney mother and he eccentrically selfish father. She has had a drawn-out, clandestine love affair with a married man whose wife is a hopeless invalid.

She is a sensitive, intelligent woman — but her sensitivity and her intelligence cannot carry her through the bewildering maze of problems in which she is caught.

She discusses her plight with her closest woman friend. She mentions in passing the place of religious faith in her life. She says, sadly: "I am only an average religious woman, 'believing,' I suppose, but not doing anything about it."

Many persons today who say that they have faith in God do very little about it. There are many Celias who have faith enough to get them to the start-line of the Christian way but not enough to get them moving along that way.

For most of us, belief in God begins by simple hearsay, probably back in early childhood when persons loved and trusted by us told us about God. And this can get us to the start-line.

It is not misleading to say that mature Christian faith begins in a gamble, in taking a chance that God is and that God is good and that God cares and that God, so to speak, focussed himself in a unique and decisive way in Jesus. There is an element of chance in crossing the start-line.

It is only when you have crossed that line and when you are struggling along the road that your belief is verified and validated. It is one of the great practicalities of faith and faith cannot first be proved and then practised but that proof and practice go together. The only satisfying "proofs" of faith come in the living of faith.

The venture of faith will not give you sunshine and roses all the way. But when you venture ahead in faith you discover its resources which can give you new, life-affirming insights and strength and courage to help sustain you when you get caught in life's storms. Faith will not keep you from difficulty — but faith can keep you from defeat.

Bill Fight Vowed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of International Harvester Co., a multi-national company that employs 6,000 people in four Canadian factories, says American businessmen are alarmed and will fight the Hartke-Burke bill now before the U.S. Congress.

Brooks McCormick of Chicago expressed his concern over the bill in an interview here Friday.

"It would shut Canada down; it would raise tariffs around the world and force us in the U.S. to live within our four walls," he said.

The Hartke-Burke bill would put quotas on all U.S. imports and impose penalties on U.S. foreign investment; give the president power to prohibit transfers of capital abroad if this would result in a "net decrease in employment" at home and halt the outflow of American technology.

Harvester's subsidiary, International Harvester Co. of Canada Ltd., has been in business in Canada since the middle 1880s.

'LOOK TO JUDAISM'

JERUSALEM (AP) — Christians should "look beyond their own noses" to get acquainted with their mother religion — Judaism, says Dr. G. Douglas Young. His American Institute for Holy Land Studies here is dedicated to just that.

"Our prime mission is to give future Christian leaders a chance to see who Jews are, learn what they believe and what contributions they have made and are making," Young says.

He says he views the institute as helping to right the wrongs that "the Christian church did to Jews for 2,000 years."

The Institute is the only American operated school of its kind in the Holy City. Located on historic Mount Zion, it serves graduate scholars or junior year-level students who want to study early Christian history, Old and New Testaments, Jewish thought and modern Israel, archeology and Hebrew.

The non-denominational, non-profit institute, functioning since 1958, is governed by a board of directors of American businessmen and evangelistic leaders.

Young, a biblical scholar and authority on Semitic culture, is the founder and president of the institute. He is an American citizen born in Korea of missionary parents.

In an interview, he said he was motivated to create the institute during a visit to Israeli Jerusalem in 1956.

"I found no American institution for Christians and I wanted to remedy this," he said. "The idea struck me as being useful to bring young American Christians over here to tell them about Israel, the Jews, and their relationship to Christianity."

Young, 61, considers himself politically and theologically as a conservative — "except on the issue of Israel."

In a letter reacting to a papal appeal for protection of the holy places in Jerusalem, Young said the religious shrines were being better cared for under Israeli control than previously under Jordanian rule.

New Building Open at UVic

The University of Victoria's new biology building — the Cunningham Building — was officially opened Friday night by Resources Minister Ray Williston.

Named after retired UVic biology professor Jeffree Cunningham, the building cost about $2.7 million. It was originally intended to be built in two stages, but a drop-off in university enrolment scuttled plans for the second phase.

The building contains 71,000 square feet of laboratories, classrooms and research areas and was designed by the Vancouver firm of Erickson-Massey.

It will take the main load of biology studies at UVic, while the Elliott Building will now be shared by physics and chemistry departments, apart from a limited area for biology facilities originally planned for the second phase of Cunningham.

UVic chancellor Roderick Haig-Brown described Cunningham at Friday night's opening as an outstanding teacher and administrator during his career at Victoria College, predecessor of the university. Cunningham served as professor of botany, zoology and biology as well as registrar and vice-principal.

He was awarded the honorary doctorate of UVic in 1964 for his 40 years of service as a teacher.

Cunningham was not present at the opening ceremonies, which started UVic's open house weekend. He is in Alaska on a holiday.

Catholic Lay Leader To Speak

Romeo Maione, of Montreal, executive director of the Canadian Catholic Organization for Development and Peace, will speak at all masses at St. Andrew's Cathedral in Victoria, on Sunday.

He is visitng Victoria in conjunction with a one-day seminar on International Development being held at St. Mary's Priory in Colwood, March 4th. It will be attended by delegates from all over Vancouver Island as well as representatives from both federal and provincial governments.

His talk will centre on the progress and aims of the organization he heads. In the past four years, it has raised and disbursed approximately $10,000,000 to self-help projects in the underdeveloped countries.

His recent election to the Papal commission responsible for looking after international justice, "Cor Unum," bears out his belief "the churches are much better suited because of their universal character to understand the very real crisis of the growing abyss between rich and poor countries."

Puget Sound Talk Topic

Dr. Dixy Lee Ray, director of the Pacific Science Centre, will give an illustrated lecture on the Puget Sound area in the Newcombe auditorium tonight at 8 p.m.

The program is part of the Heritage Court series sponsored by the provincial museum.

Dr. Ray is also associate professor of zoology at the University of Washington, and sits on a number of community committees involved in the planning of parks and other programs. She is also a member of the committee of corresponding consultants for the World Report on the Environment.

Rags to Riches Romantic . . . True

By JAIN MacLEOD

LONDON (CP) — For many pop stars, the story is one of rags to riches. Michel Pagliaro, a French-Canadian, is no exception.

"The thing is, I know what it's like to wear rags," he said. "Before my success as a singer, I was a down-and-out in Montreal for two years. No money, no nothing. It was great."

Pagliaro, at 23, today is one of the best-selling pop artists in Canada. He hopes his popularity will spread to Britain with the release of a single, Loving You Ain't Easy, on Jan. 21 and an album sometime in February.

Since 1968 when his first single, a French version of the hit song My Way, shot into the pop charts throughout Canada, Pagliaro has never looked back.

To date he's had 12 chart-toppers in Canada and reckoned that "if you walk down a street in my home town of Montreal these days and ask anyone for an opinion on my music, you'd get the reply: 'Great.'"

With a following like that, why come to Britain where he is practically unknown?

"In short," he said, "to get away from America.

"In Canada, 98 per cent of pop radio coverage is American. There is just so much going on across that border it's impossible for Canada not to be suffocated by the overflow."

COMPETITION TOUGH

He agreed that competition in the pop music field in Britain is stiffer than anywhere else "but in Canada now, you're no longer competing with Canadians—you're part of the whole North American market."

He made his first public appearance at a Montreal nightclub as a back-up spot when he was only 11.

"I tried to go to school during the day and play every night. . . I left school without any qualifications at 15."

He's always had "a musical kick" but never considered making a living out of pop until he was nine when his Italian-born father, an automobile trader, gave him a guitar.

"Most kids usually got a horse or something, but I just wanted a guitar," he recalled.

Today his instrument collection numbers over a dozen guitars.

"But each has its special function depending on the mood of the song. From soft acoustic sounds to harsh rock wails, my guitars cover the whole range. I like variety. It's essential on an album."

DIFFERENT MOULDS but sisters of a similar cast. Jill, 10, (left) and Sarah Wright, nine, both broke their left legs on the ski slopes on the same day. Sarah broke hers in the morning and Jill came tumbling after her in the afternoon. (CP Wirephoto)

Sunday, Bloody Sunday May Be Liberated . . .

LONDON (Reuter) — The British Sunday, traditionally the dullest day of the week, has come under attack in a new bill before Parliament.

The idea of Sunday as a day of rest, which is as much a consequence of habit as of religious conviction, is so ingrained in the British character that, over the past 25 years, a number of attempts to change things have failed in Parliament.

The sponsor of the new bill, Lady Lee of Asheridge, a former Labor minister of the arts, is hoping for better luck.

Her bill, known as the Sunday Theatre Bill, passed the House of Lords Jan. 1. The next step is debate in the House of Commons.

The bill is aimed at the 1780 Sunday Observance Act, one of the last relics of several centuries-old laws which once prohibited not only recreation but also work and trade on Sunday.

THEATRES COULD CHOOSE

Many such laws have already been eroded to allow concert and cinema performances on Sunday. The theatre has not been so lucky.

Lady Lee's bill is designed to remove the performance of plays on Sunday for the strictness of the 1780 act.

Under it, theatres would still open only six days a week but would be free to decide for themselves which day they would have off.

Lady Lee claims that the bill, if passed, could provide a whole new audience for the theatre. Noting that there are 60 repertory theatre companies in Britain, feels that there are many families who would like to go to the theatre but are unable to do so on week nights. Many of these people, she says, would be glad to go on Sunday.

1669 and Mothers-in-Law, Horses and Luck . . . Hah!

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

One of the reasons more people don't own racehorses is that the upkeep of a thoroughbred runs to about $10,000 a year—but the owner is lucky if his horse wins $2,000 in that time.

In North America, mothers-in-law are traditionally regarded as family trouble-makers. But among wives of the Big Namba tribe in the New Hebrides islands in the South Pacific, custom forbids them from being seen by their husband's brothers. If one of them does come along a trail, the wife flees from the path and hides her face behind a purple-dyed wig made from plant leaves.

They say the match was invented in 1669. How does that strike you?

Here's an opinion that may annoy women: Some anonymous experts claim that if young women devoted to the cultivation of their voices half the time and money they spend in beauty shops they'd be much more charming.

Here and there: There is a difference where middle-aged and elderly people suffer injuries. Those among the elderly happen mostly at home; those among the middle-aged happen mostly away from home.

LIVES FOR A DAY

Short and sweet: The May fly flies for less than a day—then dies. What a bitterness of spirit it must have if its one day dawns rainy.

What's in a girl's name? Well, Polly comes from "bitter," Phyllis means "a green bough," Nadine is "hope," Aileen is "light," Agatha is "good," Agnes is "pure," and Alice is "truth."

Folklore: It's bad luck to put on a stocking inside out. It brings good luck to pluck a piece of lint from someone else's clothing. If you give money to beggars and gypsies it protects you from the evil eye. If you sneeze on Tuesday, you'll kiss a stranger. But if you sneeze on Sunday, the devil will have power over you all week.

Puffing problem: Some researchers believe that smoking cigarettes low in tar and nicotine doesn't lessen the danger because of a very human reaction: smokers simply smoke more of them in order to get the effect they seek.

It was Benjamin Disraeli who observed, "As a general rule, nobody has money who ought to have it."

Many Bengalis Disillusioned By Lack of Jobs and Money

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — Many Bengalis are finding disillusion in their freedom.

The life of the average citizen is about as forlorn as it was before the Pakistan army cracked down on the separatist movement last March. Those a cut above the average find their pay only a fraction of what they earned under the Pakistanis.

"Many people thought that with independence Bangladesh would be filled with milk and honey, a paradise available in every square foot," says A. K. M. Hedayetful Huq, the government's director of labor. "They didn't find it."

The line outside the Dacca employment exchange stretches hundreds of feet. Men wait as long as two days for a green card that says they are registered—for nonexistent jobs. A separate line for women is shorter.

About 130,000 have obtained cards, with 4,000 more signing up every day.

PROBLEMS MULTIPLY

Anisuzzaman believes the problems will multiply when the registered laborers realize that the new government can't give them employment because there is no money.

The labor ministry lacks accurate figures on unemployment but considers it dangerously high. Of 75 million Bengalis, 26 million are in the work force. A million worked in heavy and medium industry before the factories shut down.

Prices for rice and everything else are higher than before, although inflation is less for necessities than for luxuries.

A bicycle-rickshaw driver's daily take-home is no more than two rupees—about 25 cents. Trained workers, such as a waiter in a first-class hotel, earn no more than the equivalent of $40 a month, unusually much less.

Water Lack Blocks Sidney

Developers are hammering at Sidney's door but at least four large-scale subdivision and multiple dwelling plans are being held up because of a potential water shortage.

Sidney Waterworks District has called a halt to major construction projects in this area because they feel the water supply is inadequate.

For nine months of the year, this municipality has an abundance of water and is faced with the necessity of spending nearly $1,000,000 to remove storm waters from its new sewer system.

During the summer however, supplies dwindle dangerously low and the recent increase in demand for building permits plus the fact that consumption jumped seven million gallons in 1971 over the 1970 figure, is worrying Sidney Waterworks District.

Three new deep wells are being drilled in Sidney and their potential will be determined by March 15 says Waterworks board chairman J. E. Bosher.

When asked what will happen if the tests are disappointing, Bosher replied that this would be a matter for Board consideration.

"Right now we are drilling and hoping," he added.

The jump in demand for new water connections is reflected in the last months of 1971. Of the 166 connections made last year, 90 were for houses completed since September.

Building permits are not actually being withheld, says a Sidney municipal official. "But developers are being advised to hold their plans in abeyance because there is some doubt as to the adequacy of the water supply."

Permits for single-family dwellings on established lots are not restricted.

A minimum reserve of two million gallosn is needed to see Sidney through the dry period, estimates chairman Bosher but a reservoir with this capacity is not only costly but would necessitate chlorination of the water.

The Water District has recently leased from the transport department at Victoria International Airport a 300,000-gallon storage tank which will be used to augment the summer supply.

In past years, Sidney has tapped the Elk Lake water used by Central and North Saanich. Chairman Bosher feels however that with the continual increase in residential development in these areas, this source may not be available to Sidney much longer.

Although talks have been held with the Greater Victoria Water District, "the meeting was inconclusive" said the chairman.

"But it did lead to an exchange of information and an appreciation by all of the magnitude of the problems involved in extension of the Greater Victoria supply to the north Peninsula."

At present, this supply would be prohibitively expensive, costing the individual between $15 and $20 each month, estimated Bosher. Present water rates in Sidney average $5 per month.

Dublin Zoo Reduces Admissions

DUBLIN — This city's zoological gardens, located in Phoenix Park which covers nearly three square miles, are the third oldest in the world, dating from 1830.

The zoo has been famous for breeding lions since 1857. In fact more lions have been bred in these gardens than any other zoo in the world. The cubs have been sent to all parts of the globe, including Africa.

The Dublin Zoo is now offering specially reduced admission and restaurant rates to groups of 20 persons or more. The new admission rates are: adults 65 cents, children 25. The lunch which costs about $1.40 for adults and slightly less for children includes, soup, roast beef, potatoes and fresh peas, fruit jelly and ice cream.

The Zoo is a non-profit making organization, so that any funds available are used to improve the amenities. Particular attention is given to the health and requirements of the animals.

Weddings

Gornall — Comrie

A pretty double-ring ceremony took place on the evening of February 19, 1972, in First United Church when Phyllis Margaret Comrie, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. I. Comrie, was given in marriage by her father to John Brian Gornall, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gornall. The marriage vows were written by the bride and groom and were repeated in unison after the Reverend R. A. Faris, who performed the ceremony. A verse from "The Prophet" was read as a prayer. The soloist was Mr. Joseph Fee, who sang "Because."

The bride was radiant in a floor length gown of white silk crepe trimmed with lace. The puffed sleeves were cuffed with lace and the cathedral length train also had a lace trim. Her finger-tip veil was held in place with a dainty lace cap. Her bouquet was of Jack-O'-Lantern roses and white freesias. The bride's attendants were identical gowns of coral crepe trimmed with pearls and carried bouquets of Jack-O'-Lantern roses and crystal mums. Mrs. Sandra Cameron, the bride's sister, was matron-of-honour and Miss Debbie Nicol, was her bridesmaid. The groom's best man was his brother, Mr. Dennis Gornall. Mr. Dallas Wright and Mr. Barry English were the ushers.

A reception followed at the Carlton Club, where Mr. Cecil Fawcett, the bride's uncle, proposed the toast to the bride.

The happy couple will be making their home at 623 Alder Street, Campbell River, B.C.

Out of town guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Wright, Richmond, B.C., Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Gornall, Campbell River, Miss Pat Gornall, Port Alberni, Mr. and Mrs. John Thomson, Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. Brian Wynn, Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. Skip Stothert, Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce McConnan, Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Gornall, Vancouver and Mr. and Mrs. Barry English, Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Coutts, Miss Margaret Coutts, Edmonton, Alta., Mr. and Mrs. R. D. C. Comrie of Edmonton, Alta., Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Fawcett and Donald Fawcett of Calgary, Alta., Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Johnson, Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. J. Simpson, also of Richmond.

Afraid to Open Your Mouth?
Bad breath often becomes a real problem for many people with deteriorating dentition . . . gum trouble, caps, bridgework and especially dentures. Only your dentist can rectify these conditions. But Steri/sol Oral Antiseptic does much to control accompanying bad breath. Steri/sol is specially designed for this purpose. Steri/sol's formulation contains an exclusive, active ingredient called Hexetidine that deprives bacteria of thiamine. Without thiamine, the mouth-germs that cause bad breath cannot live. In fact, Steri/sol with Hexetidine is so effective, it kills 95% of these mouth-germs within 15 minutes. Then it clings to the mouth and gum tissue to control bad breath for up to 10 hours. No wonder many dentists use Steri/sol.
Try Steri/sol with Hexetidine. It costs more than you usually pay for a mouthwash, but then Steri/sol is not your usual mouthwash. Sold only at pharmacies.

Steri/sol Oral Antiseptic (with Hexetidine)

9 IN MEMORIAM

HUGHES (Nimbley), Linda Dianne — In fond and loving memory of a dear 11-year-old daughter killed on crosswalk, March 2, 1971.
Little we new when we woke that morn
The sorrow that day would bring.
We were not there to see you die,
To clasp your hand or say goodbye,
But we'll remember our whole life through
The last few words we had with you.
The way you walked and smiled,
The things you always said and did
Are with us all the time.
Time cannot fill that empty chair
That holds an empty space,
Time cannot make our home the same
Without you in your place.
The grief is hard to bear
When family meets and you're not there.
If we could have life's dearest wish
And all earth's pleasures too,
Or back from Heaven what we could
Dear Linda, we would ask for you.
God rows, it was a lonesome year
—Sadly missed by Mom and Dad.

HUGHES, Linda (Nimbley) — In fond and loving memory of a dear sister — passed away on March 2, 1971.
We have lost a precious rose
The grief was hard to bear
Though time may smooth the heavy blow
A cure is something we will never know.
To those who knew her
All will know how much we lost one year ago.
When we see the girls at play
We ask that God to help us pray,
Time passes but love and memories never die.
—Always remembered and sadly missed, Sandra and Gerry and her Nanny.

JOHNSON — Arnold, who passed away March 5, 1971 — In fond memory of Arnold Johnson, a dear brother and uncle.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear.
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him near.
—From brother Ed, Dorothy and Bobbie.

JOHNSON — In memory of a loving husband Arnold, who passed away March 5th, 1971.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear.
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him near.
—Sadly missed by his loving wife Lena.

PEDERSEN — In loving memory of our mother and grandmother, Paula Pedersen, who passed away March 4, 1968.
We do not need a special day
To bring you to our mind
For the days we do not think of you
Are very hard to find.
—Always remembered by daughter, Vivian, and Maren and families, Halifax, N.S.

Paper Sees Split In Que. Cabinet

MONTREAL (CP) — The Star says the Quebec cabinet appears split on the issue of relations with Ottawa "particularly in the case of the recent dispute over the inclusion of Quebec public employees in the federal unemployment insurance plan."

The provincial government, after protracted delay, announced last month it was giving up its efforts to have school board and hospital employees excluded from the unemployment insurance plan.

The Star, in a report from Quebec City, quotes Social Affairs Minister Claude Castonguay and Civil Service Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier as saying that they were absent from the cabinet meeting at which this decision was taken.

The newspaper says this leaves the impression that "two of the ministers most directly involved in the issue had no say in the decision."

The split, it adds, appears to be between Premier Robert Bourassa and others who favor "quiet negotiations" and the "more aggressive" wing of the Liberal cabinet.

Thursday, Quebec Le Soleil said minutes of cabinet discussions showed Mr. L'Allier and Mr. Castonguay attended the meeting, although the Le Soleil report did not say how the secret cabinet minutes were divulged.

The Star says they may have been revealed by a cabinet minister trying "to discredit or otherwise embarass Mr. Castonguay and Mr. L'Allier."

The Star says these two ministers are "known to be impatient" with progress of discussion between Quebec and the federal government on several subjects, including family allowances and cable television.

Centre Group Chooses Title

The group which will attempt to establish a recreational and artistic centre for Lower Vancouver Island will be known as the Pacific Coast Centre Foundation.

A spokesman said the title was chosen at a meeting Friday of the special steering committee set up early last month, and the group will now be incorporated and registered under that name.

"We deliberately avoided the terms 'Victoria' and civic' because we want to convey wider implications," the spokesman said.

The group's "comprehensive" aims are to raise funds and create and develop a Pacific Centre for recreation and the arts, based on the old Crystal Garden site which it hopes to lease from the city of Victoria.

Elected chairman pro tem at Friday's meeting was Allan Purdy, well known for his interest in the arts in Victoria. Vice-chairman is John Goult, secretary Mrs. Janet Senior and treasurer Colin Rutherford.

The group plans to make an early start on its fund raising drive by approaching all levels of government and initiating a campaign for public, business and industrial support.

But no target can be set until more detailed consultations have been held with architects and others.

Manchester Retains Lead

LONDON (CP) — Francis Lee scored two goals against Arsenal today and kept Manchester City in a clear four-point lead in the race for the English League soccer championship.

Lee's goals, one of them a penalty, gave Manchester a 2-0 victory before a crowd of 42,000 at Manchester's Maine Road stadium.

Leeds trounced Southampton 7-0 and stayed on Manchester City's heels.

Manchester City has 45 points from 32 games. Leeds is second with 41 points from 30 games and Derby County, which edged Wolverhampton 2-1, is third with 40 points from 30 games.

Oil Pipeline Costs Double to $3.5B

JUNEAU, Alaska (UPI) — A new analysis of the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline shows construction costs may be $3.5 billion or more — twice the estimates of two years ago, the Alaska commissioner of revenue reported Friday.

Commissioner Eric Wohlforth sad the increased cost estimates, resulting from inflation and environmental restrictions, indicate Alaska can expect to receive only 25 to 50 per cent of oil revenues previously anticipated if the pipeline is built.

"Recently, through our own independent analysis, we learned that oil won't be flowing through to maximum capacity of the line until seven years after construction," he said.

That fact, plus the higher construction costs, mean that the state can't expect much in the way of royalties and severance taxes in the first few years of operation, estimated to be between 1978 and 1980, he said.

Wohlforth said royalties paid to Alaska's 55,000 natives under the natives land claim settlement would be similarly affected.

Asked if the higher construction costs place the whole pipeline project in jeopardy, he said: "We don't believe it puts a damper on construction. We still believe the line will be built."

The proposed pipeline would run almost 800 miles from Prudhoe Bay on the Arctic Ocean to the ice-free port of Valdez in southeastern Alaska.

Wohlforth said the state expects the permit for the pipeline will be issued shortly after the U.S. interior department receives the final statement of environmental impact next month. But if the permit is issued, several anti-pipeline groups are ready to challenge it in the courts.

CHOPPY WATER BARS UNDERWATER SEARCH

VANCOUVER (CP) — Choppy water prevented the two-man submersible craft Nekton from searching Friday for the missing tug Haro Straits, carrying five men and believed sunk in 620 feet of water off Point Roberts, Wash.

An official of Rivtow Straits Ltd., owners of the tug, said the four-ton submersible had been launched but was prevented by sloppy weather from entering the area where the tug is believed to have sunk.

The Nekton, chartered by the transport department, completed its preliminary tests Thursday after being brought here from San Diego, Calif.

The Haro Straits disappeared Sunday in a storm which battered the Gulf of Georgia with winds of up to 75 miles an hour.

Two barges it had been towing were discovered Monday in a fixed position with oil rising to the surface nearby, leading searchers to believe the tug might still be attached to the tow line, an inflatable life raft and a life ring from the Haro Straits were found earlier in the week.

BRAINWASHING INFLUENCE?

MONTREAL (CP) — Research reported to be partly responsible for elimination of certain British interrogation methods in Northern Ireland was begun in Canada more than 20 years ago, says the man who started it.

Psychologist Donald Hebb, now chancellor of McGill University, said in an interview Friday that Canada was the first country to research on "brainwashing" techniques at the start of the "cold war."

In London, a British brain expert said Canadian research helped form a minority report of the Parker committee and led to elimination of the hood-and-noise technique in extracting secrets from Irish Republican Army suspects.

The minority report by Lord Gardiner cited medical evidence of lasting effects from deprivation of food, sleep, light and sound — methods used on IRA suspects by the British.

Dr. Hebb said in 1951 he met a small group of British, American and Canadian government officials concerned about brainwashing in the Korean War and "funny trials in Russia where apparently untortured prisoners got to make unbelievable confessions."

He said he suggested sensory isolation and deprivation as a possible technique. Under the auspices of the defence research board he worked on the problem from 1951 to 1955.

"But that's kind of ancient history now," he commented. "Much of the more recent work has been done by John Zubek on the academic aspects, at the University of Manitoba.

"It was a very powerful thing. God only knows what they could do with it now."

Canada-U.S. Relationship 'Never Closer'

TORONTO (CP) — Canada and the United States have never had a more close working relationship than they do at present, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Wednesday night.

He told more than 2,600 persons who paid $50 a plate for a dinner sponsored by the Toronto and District Liberal Association that "Canada is not, I emphasize, being coerced. Contrary to some local myths, the United States government does not act in that way."

At the same time, in defending his government's policies, Trudeau said Canada's growth rate for 1971 would likely show that this country's growth rate would be "in excess of that enjoyed by every other major industrial country in the Western world, and even that of Japan."

He said that figures indicate the growth rate would be more than twice that of the United States in 1971.

The dinner, which raised about $100,000 for the Liberal party for an election expected this year, climaxed Trudeau's day in Toronto.

Detained Indian Given Apology

OTTAWA (CP) — Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said Friday the incident of an Indian who was stopped by security guards in the Parliament buildings when he sought to reach the press gallery was a "regrettable" one that caused "inconvenience and embarrassment."

He said the treatment Thursday of Roger Jay, communications officer, for the Union of Ontario Indians, was irregular and he hoped it would not happen again.

He was delivering his second report of the day in the Commons, a day after Mr. Jay was stopped and questioned by protective staff when he tried to bring a news release to the press gallery. He was taken to the office of L. G. Syms, chief of the protective staff, for questioning.

The Canadian Press was informed by Mr. Syms that Mr. Jay was carrying literature that should not be allowed in Parliament and suggested a CP reporter go outside the building to collect the material.

Mrs. Lamoureux's afternoon statement disputed that.

He said the papers Mr. Jay had were not looked at for their contents but only to see whether they were for the press gallery.

Mr. Lamoureux said the normal practice when somebody arrives at the main entrance is to communicate with the press gallery to arrange either for delivery of a communication or have it picked up. Following that practice Carl Mollins parliamentary editor of The Canadian Press had been telephoned.

Mr. Lamoureux said:

"The chief of the protective staff of the House of commons gives the assurance that the action taken was not inspired by the contents of the release but only to ensure that the papers were indeed intended for distribution to the press gallery. At the same time, it would appear that the procedure adopted by the security personnel was irregular and that it did cause Mr. Jay inconvenience and embarrassment.

"In the circumstances, I have no hesitation in saying on behalf of all honorable members that the incident is a regrettable one, and express the hope that such incidents can be avoided in the future."

In a morning statement Mr. Lamoureux had said he was awaiting a full report on the incident but in the interim he offered an apology to Mr. Jay "if in any way we are at fault."

He said Mr. Jay had every right to be admitted to the Parliament buildings.

Quebec Indians to Get Sales Tax Exemption?

MONTREAL (CP) — The Star says the Quebec government is expected to announce next week that Indians in the province no longer will have to pay sales tax on any goods delivered to reservations or "settlement."

The newspaper says the agreement has come from "secret and historic negotiations" in progress since January "which may ultimately decide the fate of the Indians of James Bay," where Quebec plans a huge hydro-electric development.

The article says Lionel Chevrier, former Canadian high commissioner in London and a former federal transport minister, has been negotiating for the province with the Indians.

It says the agreement would exempt Indians from the eight-per-cent sales tax on "everything from automobiles to shoe laces," although, in the case of automobile purchases, the tax will be paid at time of purchase and a refund made later by the provincial revenue department.

Andre Delisle, president of the Indians of Quebec Association, said he expects the sales tax agreement to be made public next week.

APPROVED FEB. 22

The newspaper says "a source" confirmed the agreement was approved by the cabinet Feb. 22.

Indian activists have said Chief Delisle is prepared to "sell the people of James Bay down the river" in return for concessions such as the sales tax, the newspaper says.

But the chief says the $6-billion James Bay hydro-electric project, on which construction is expected to start this year, is the source of the criticism and it has not been discusssd.

"The people of James Bay firmly oppose the project so we have no right to even bring it up at the negotiating table," he says.

The Star says it is clear the plans to harness five rivers for hydro-electric energy equivalent to the total current generating capacity of the province "eventually will be discussed."

INQUIRY HELD

The Star says the negotiations started after a provincial commission of inquiry found the Indians had a "real and incontestable territorial right" over huge tracts of land in northern Quebec, including the James Bay area.

The newspaper says the Indians have demanded $5 million, compared to the estimate by the commission that $34 million would be a "reasonable" figure for territorial purchase.

The Star says the sales tax concession is only the first the Indians want to "squeeze" out of the province. Others include provision of land for schools and unrestricted hunting and fishing rights for Indians and Eskimos.

First Head Dedicates Centre

The first principal of George Jay School which was opened in 1910, will dedicate the school's new gymnasium and resource centre at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Henry MacLean, who later developed the MacLean method of penmanship used for years in Canadian schools, will be accompanied by former teachers and pupils of the school.

Also attending will be Mrs. Gertrude Mutch, daughter of the late George Jay, school board chairman and magistrate after whom the school was named; two of Jay's granddaughters, Mrs. R. J. Healy and Mrs. L. B. Excell; and daughters and granddaughters of MacLean.

Invitations to the opening have been sent out to parents of children at the school in English, Punjabi and Chinese since many of the children's parents speak those languages.

Track Price Beyond Reach Of Horsemen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Efforts of a group of British Columbia horsemen to buy the assets of Exhibition Park race track and run it on a non-profit basis have come to a dead stop.

Reg Ellett, president of the B.C. Thoroughbred Breeders Society and spokesman for the group, said Friday the price set by the B.C. Jockey Club, operators of the track, was not acceptable and "we now have withdrawn our original offer."

Ellett said the difference between the bid and asking prices was "substantial, and it left no room for negotiation."

Both Ellett and Jack Diamon, co-president of the Jockey Club, agreed not to make the figures public.

Opera Premiere

SEATTLE — "Black Widow," a new opera by the young American composer Thomas Pasatieri, received a standing ovation at its world premiere Thursday night at the Seattle Opera.

The dramatic story — a young widow so obsessed with her inability to bear children that she has her lover marry his childhood sweetheart in order to produce a child for her — used a compelling score, stark lighting and multimedia projections to move between the worlds of reality and dreams.

Pasatieri's music, utilizing a strong woodwind emphasis, ranted from the dark depths of despair felt by the childless Raquel to the lyrical pledge of love by Berta for her childhood sweetheart, Juan.

Quebec Guards Return to Jobs

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec peace officers, including jail guards, return to work today after voting Friday to end a month-long walkout. The return comes without a contract dispute with the gov-contract dispute with hte government.

The 3,000-member Provincial Peace Officers Association began the walkout Feb. 5 to back salary demands and to protest lagging negotiations.

A spokesman for the Quebec civil service department said the men will begin returning to work at 4 p.m.

However, union leaders said the back-to-work vote does not mean members have accepted the government's latest salary offer and conditions.

Negotiations are to resume next week.

The Association represents the guards, autoroute police, game wardens and government building guards whose contract with the government expired last July.

JAILS CLOSED

The walkout forced the closing of 22 of the province's 35 prisons and disrupted court hearings because prisoners could not be transported from prisons to courthouses.

About 1,000 prisoners were trahsferred to federal institutions and the 13 remaining provincial jails which were manned by supervisory personnel.

The association has demanded wage parity with federal prison guards, who earn $9,000 a year after eight years service.

A government offer of $8,625 —to be reached at the end of a three-year contract—was rejected by the peace officers, who now earn $6,800 after eight years.

Union leaders also rejected a tentative agreement reached between government and union negotiators Feb. 24.

WORKED TO RULE

The lengthy dispute has been marked by study sessions, court disruptions, pickets, prison occupation and work-to-rule campaigns by association members.

Prior to the walkout six provincial prisons, including Montreal's Bordeaux Jail, were occupied for 18 hours by prison guards. No incidents were reported.

The men ended the sit-in after Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette promised contract negotiations would resume.

The occupations were followed by a mass study session in Drummondville, 75 miles east of Montreal, where 800 members voted to call a walkout and urged all guards to leave their posts.

The walkout spread across the province, leaving the prisons in the hands of supervisory personnel and severely restricting visiting privileges and prisoner activity.

'DRILL' NETS $1,300 HAUL

MITOL, Japan (Reuter) — "This is the police," said a voice on the telephone to an agricultural co-operative association in Mito. "We are going to conduct a robbery drill at your office."

Two hours later a masked man carrying a shotgun appeared at the association's office and helped himself to about $1,300.

He tied up one official then disappeared after giving office girls a receipt for the money.

TEACHERS PROTEST

HALIFAX (CP) — Junior and senior high school teachers in Halifax County launched a work-to-rule campaign Friday to protest the provincial government's 5 per cent wage guideline.

Under the campaign, students receive written assignments only. There is no discussion or explanation of the assignment. The campaign does not affect students up to and including Grade 6.

FACTS ABOUT FUNERALS

One by one, old ways give way to the new, and the continuing argument is waged as to which is better.

Funeral service, too, must constantly change—remaining flexible enough to meet the highly varied wishes of all people, whether "traditional" or "mod" or somewhere in between. We recognize and respect the individuality of all who call us.

A funeral is a highly personal event. It is a family's final tribute to one of their own, and as such should be based upon their individual wishes and feelings. Anyone who attempts to standardize funerals for any reason is actually doing the public a disservice.

An important purpose of the funeral ceremony is to tender respect to the deceased and to serve the family in the time of their sorrow.

For families not wishing the conventional or traditional services our members offer memorial services from $100.

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: When I gave Bad Dog one of my tranquilizers, he really flipped. He trotted madly about the house, panted continuously and looked wild-eyed. He spent all night doing this but finally relaxed and went to sleep in the morning. I've learned my lesson and I won't do it again, of course, but what happened? — G.T.

DEAR G.T.: Within almost any species of animal some tranquilizers stimulate rather than relax. Many of these unfortunate reactions are considerably more bizarre even than you have described. Reactions range from simply vomiting the tranquilizer before it is completely absorbed to inducing a psychotic state similar to that seen in rabies. Such reactions may occur, although with extreme rarity, even with tranquilizers which are intended for use in pet animals but are more likely to be induced by people pacifier pills. As I have often indicated, human medicine should never be used for a pet without the veterinarian's specific approval.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have been told to test my white cat for deafness by clapping hands behind his head. Apparently he can hear this all right because he turns his head or twitches his ears every time I do it. So I don't know whether he is just dumb or stubborn by no matter how hard I yell at him, he won't pay any attention to me except sometimes when he is looking straight at me.—N.F.

DEAR N.F.: White cats, especially blue-eyed ones, are frequently deaf. However, testing with the handclap method is unreliable because the clapping of hands creates a strong air movement behind his head which the cat may feel, and respond to, whether he hears anything or not. Try some other noisemaker instead of your hands for this test but be sure it is one that doesn't again create a gush of air.

Banff Resort Looks Certain

By STUART LANE

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite the growing outcry aginst a proposed resort development in the Lake Louise area of Banff National Park, government officials here are confident they have the backing of a majority of Canadians in going ahead with the project.

More important perhaps, they feel sure that Northern Development Minister Jean Cretien, the minister rsponsible for the parks, also is on their side.

For more than 10 years the parks branch tried to interest private developers in investing money for a ski resort at Lake Louise, one of the more beautiful park areas in Canada.

They finally succeeded last year when Imperial Oil and Lake Louise Lifts Ltd.—it runs the existing ski facilities in the park—proposed to spend $30 million on new buildings and improving the year-round facilities at Lake Louise.

Until two years ago, say park officials, the proposal would have run into little, if any, opposition.

Now, with the growing number of groups concerned about the environment and the aim of keeping national parks in their wilderness state, the Lake Louise project is under constant criticism.

SIDE DISTORTED

Unfortunately, say the federal park officials, only one side of the debate is being aired and that by a small minority of park users.

They also feel the side presented by the conservationists is distorted.

"Only seven per cent of the 13 million park users last year were seeking a wilderness experience," said one official.

"The remaining 93 per cent came from recreation or a family outing."

Park officials say they would like to hear from representatives of this vast majority both in the public debate and at hearings into the project next week in calgary.

But they almost cheerfully admit that up to 70 per cent of briefs at the public hearing probably will be opposed to the deyelopment.

It has been suggested that Mr. Chretien is only waiting for the public to speak out against the development to have an excuse to kill it.

"Those who say that don't know our minister," say park people. "We would not have gone this far in our planning without his support."

ALSO OFF BASE

Park officials say one of the facts that is not being aired in the debate is that only one-tenth of one per cent of Banff's 2,564 square miles is affected by the project.

Further, most of the land affected already is committed to development under previous agreements.

The building site for some of the larger buildings now is an asphalt parking area, considered one of the biggest eyesores in the Lake Louise area.

Those who see the development as a reserve for the wealthy also are off base, the park people insist.

There will be luxury accommodations but facilities like dormitories also will be available for those with modest incomes.

The government must have a veto on the type of development and also would have to improve rates charged.

The developers would get a 42-year lease with the option of a 10-year renewal. During that time it would need government approval for all of its operations.

After 52 years, the development would pass into the hands of the government, they say.

Another criticism is that it is a sellout to U.S. interests because of Imperial Oil's involvement. Imperial is a subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey.

Park people reply that Lake Louise Lifts is a Canadian company. And 40 per cent of Imperial also is Canadian-owned.

"In the long run, it is a political decision and it will be up to the minister to decide."

GERMAN WINE: A GREAT YEAR

BONN (Reuter) — Tastings of West Germany's 1971 vintage have begun and experts are already classing it as a "wine of the century."

They say its balance of sweetness and natural acidity can be compared only with a handful of Germany's other great vintage years—1911, 1929, 1945, 1953 and 1959.

An exceptionally dry summer and other desirable climatic features combined to produce this "dream" blend. Summer sunshine was followed by some rain in autumn, then sun and mist encouraged the spread of a rare wine-enriching, fungus-like mould.

This holds true, experts say, for all West German vineyards —about 150,000 acres— mostly concentrated on steep hills which line the banks of the Rhine and Moselle Rivers. Germany's Rhine wines and Moselles are among the most famous white wines in the world.

In 1970, West Germany exported 6,641,236 gallons of white wine and 383,682 gallons of red wine.

A spokesman for the West German Wine Exporters Association in Bonn said the figure for last year would be even higher.

Venezuela Eyes U.S. Oil Firms

CARACAS (WP) — Venezuela appears to be moving rapidly toward nationalization of over $5 billion in foreign oil investments here.

Although existing drilling concessions run until 1983 or beyound, President Rafel Caldra may take over the concessions before his term expires in two years.

Opinions vary on whether political expediency, economic pressure, or moral outrage has motivated the Venezuelans, but it is clear that the atmosphere of mutual confidence between the government and the companies — which are mostly American-owned — has evaporated.

Already the government has sharply increased taxes and imposed other restrictions on the companies, and they in turn have decreased production.

The U.S. government is concerned not just because of the size of the American private investment here but because the United States is increasingly dependent on foreign energy sources and Venezuela has been the most ample and dependable supplier. The U.S. embassy is making it known that it regards the situation as too critical to leave to the companies and that government-to-government negotiations are needed.

ORDERLY RETURN

In an interview, Hugo Perez la Salvia, the mines and petroleum minister, said that kind of contact has been going on and is continuing.

The policy of the government, he said is to maximize its return on oil, and to prepare for an orderly return to government control of the existing 40-year concessions, which are to fall due in 1983 and 1984.

He said present law — which under a bill enacted last year provides for the uncompensated turnover to the government of the oil company assets when the concessions expire — is adequate for control of the companies.

As recently as last week President Caldera, asked about the prospects for quick nationalization, talked vaguely of a continuation of present policy.

But in fact, recent steps have left the companies few options beyond acceptance of full government control over production or refusal to produce.

LESSON LEARNED

The political success of Chilean President Salvador Allende in nationalizing the copper industry is a lesson not lost on Caldera's advisers as the struggle begins here for the succession to the presidency in 1974.

But party intimates who hint that nationalization could come in time for the elections insist that the motivation would be moral and economic, not political.

Venezuelan policy over the years has been to bargain for an ever larger part of the ever larger profits of Creole Petroleum (which is over 90 per cent owned by Standard Oil of New Jersey), Shell, and the other concessionaries. Sometimes the bargaining got tough, as when Romulo Betancourt's Democratic Action Party broke a long-standing barrier to achieve a 50-50 profit split. But those recurrent debates with the companies were kept out of public affairs. Now there is a new bitterness toward the companies.

Meanwhile, oil production has fallen from 3.7 million barrels daily last year at this time to 3.1 million.

Quebec Departure Concerns Many

BY THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

Over the past two years, Canadian attitudes towards the damage the rest of Canada would suffer if Quebec were to leave Confederation, have changed very little. Despite the FLQ crises last fall, and the demands of the Parti Quebecois, the public views the possibility in much the same way it did in mid-1971. Nationally, 3% less think it would pose serious problems for the nation, while another 4% more consider it would not.

The Maritimes, Ontario and the West think in close patterns with just under one in ten less, in each region now thinking it would not be serious. Ontario, however is more concerned about the possibility with just under one in ten more thinking it would be bad today, than did so in 1970.

Maritime opinion has changed the most in a belief that such a separation would not be very serious — up 18% from two years ago.

In Quebec the same ratio of about one in ten, today are less inclined to think separation would be serious for Canada, with the same proportion increasing the ranks of those who do not think it would be.

THE QUESTION

The question, put to a national sample of Canadians in 1966, 1970, and again in 1972:

The table below compares national attitudes since 1966, and reveals today's opinions in the main regions.

Bobby Fischer obviously has maintained a high plateau of play in recent years. How else could he achieve what he has? But one of the finest hours in this young man's career was recorded when he was only half as old as he is now. This placed him among the chess prodigies of all time, and occurred in the 1956 Rosenwald Tournament in New York.

DEATH COMES TO A GRANDMASTER

In the Ninth Akiba Rubenstein Memorial Tournament in Polanica Zdroj, Poland, at the end of last year, the U.S.S.R.'s Alexander Saisev, a grandmaster, took control early and it looked as if nobody could possible beat him. Then, to the surprise of everyone there, his game suddenly collapsed.

We wondered about this along with those who were on the scene. Then we read in "64," the Russian chess weekly, that Saisev, an electro-engineer who lived in Vladivostock, had died suddenly at the age of 36, only two months after the Rubenstein match. It seems highly likely that his poor showing there might have been caused by the illness that cost him his life.

TAIWAN TAKEOVER WHEN CHIANG DIES

PARIS (AP) — Andre Malraux says there has been a long-standing agreement between Peking and Taipei that Taiwan will come under Communist Chinese control after the death of Chiang Kai-shek.

Malraux, French intellectual and specialist on Communist China, made a special trip to Washington last month to talk to President Nixon in advance of the president's trip to Peking.

When asked Thursday during an interview with the French news agency, AFP, if he had been surprised by the Chinese-American communique summing up the bilateral talks, or of concessions by Nixon on Taiwan, Malraux replied:

"I was not, since Nixon was not . . . I do not think that Nixon gave up anything on Taiwan because there has been, between Peking and Taipei, an agreement for at least five years linked to the death of Chiang Kai-shk. But they did not think Chiang Kai-shek would live so long.

"I am convinced of the existence of this agreement under which Nationalist China will again become Chinese when Chiang Kai-shek dies. The form of the transformation will certainly be subtle. But we can count on the Chinese for subtlety, I told Nixon this.

"Fundamentally, the Americans had a fixed idea on this. Good. Let's not get excited about this. It is subtle. They know that they will not fight for Taiwan and the Chinese know it too. . . ."

Plane's tail protrudes from wreckage of house it hit in Albany, N.Y.

Plane Hits House, Kills 17

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — A Mohawk Airlines turboprop, one of its two engines not functioning, crashed into a $50,000 home in a fashionable section of this city during a snowstorm Friday night.

The coroner's office said 17 persons were killed and 36 injured, the plane carried 45 passengers and a crew of three, and there were five persons in the large, white two-storey home.

One of the engines of the FH227 turboprop was out, and the pilot apparently cut the other, knowing he would not make it to Albany airport 3½ miles away. The plane glided into the living room of the house that Joseph Rosen had built 10 years ago.

Rosen, 43, his wife Marcia, 35, and their children, Lawrence, 10 and Roger, 6, were watching The Partridge Family on television when the nose of the plane sliced through their home, caving in the roof and half-knocking the structure over.

Mr. and Mrs. Rosen were flung into the backyard, but survived. Lawrence was found inside the wrecked home, hiding in a closet. Roger also was found in the house, frightened but alive.

Peter Surgent, who lived in an upstairs apartment, was killed. His wife Hanna was not home at the time, police said.

"It was a mess," said Robert Dumas, a fireman from suburban Colonie who was one of the first inside the wreckage. "They cut a hole through the side of the fuselage with a power saw.

"They were all strapped in the seats," Dumas said. "Each seat went forward like dominoes piled on top of each other."

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration at Albany county airport said contact with the plane, Mohawk's Flight 405, was lost when the craft was 3 or 4 miles from the airport — a mile or so after the pilot radioed that he had "feathered" one of the two engines.

A spokesman at Mohawk headquarters in Utica said there was no indication of details of the nature of the emergency aboard the plane.

Sonya Krakower was shaking with terror in the hallway of her home next door, just feet from the shattered living room window where the plane's wing came to rest.

"We grew accustomed to the planes flying over," she said. "We knew we were in the flight path.

"We'd sit outside in the summer and joke about it sometimes. It would really look like they were going to land in the backyard."

Outside, along her driveway, blood stained the fresh snow where a temporary morgue had been set up.

"It finally happened," she said.

2 Grit MPs Rip B.C. Politicians

OTTAWA (CP)—Two Liberal MPs from British Columbia ridings tore into an unnamed group of west coast politicians Friday, accusing them of being anti-French.

Bruce Howard, parliamentary secretary to Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, and Paul St. Pierre, parliamentary secretary to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, did not identify their targets.

But they obviously included some members of Premier Bennett's Social Credit government.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary) said he had seen the same kind of prejudice in his province as had been evident in Quebec, "where the disease of separatism has been used by some as a vehicle for racism and for personal political gain."

Mr. Howard spoke during second reading of a bill to renew the federal equalization system whereby rich provinces give aid to their poorer neighbors. He said that some B.C. politicians don't seem to be opposed to equalization transfers to other English-speaking provinces.

DIFFERENT ON QUEBEC?

But they did oppose giving any money to Quebec, even though that province received less than almost all the other recipient provinces on a per-capita basis.

The bill received second reading, and will proceed to the Commons finance committee for detailed scrutiny.

Mr. St. Pierre (Coast-Chilcotin) said B.C. politicians have been making "irresponsible statements" aimed at showing that French-speaking Canadians are being favored by the Trudeau government.

He said that a detailed study of facts did not bear this out. Although Quebec had received more regional economic expansion grants than any other province on an absolute basis, on a per-capita basis the province ranked only fourth.

J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) chipped in that some people in British Columbia apparently want to forget that their now-booming province received a big subsidy from Eastern Canada during the last century when taxpayers subsidized the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

BENNETT'S A PRODUCT

Premier Bennett himself had been a product of the equalization system, said Mr. Nowlan.

He had been brought up in New Brunswick and had been educated in a school system partially supported by equalization grants.

Then he had gone west to "do very well for himself."

Equalization payments to the provinces with revenues below those of the donor provinces — Ontario, British Columbia and Alberta— are expected to amount to $1 billion in 1972-73 and about $1.5 billion in 1976-77.

Representatives of the Bennett government have spoken out against the system, and were even threatening a few

DAVIS DEPLORES U.S. LAW BLOCK

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis Friday protested the United States' objections that scuttled the sale of the Pisces IV mini-submarine to the Soviet Union and could block Ottawa's plan to lease it to Russia.

"Certainly an American law should not extend to Canada," Davis said during a visit to the yard of International Hydrodynamics Co. Ltd., designer of the Pisces.

Ottawa cancelled the sale to Russia in december after Washington objected. The federal government then decided to buy the submersible and discussed leasing it, with a Canadian crew, to the Soviet Union.

But Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin told the Commons Thursday that even for a lease arrangement "we must have approval from the U.S.A." because the Pisces contains American components.

'Loffmark Hid In Slander'

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark was accused Friday of slandering a sick woman who needed heart surgery to cover up his own ineptness in planning medical facilities in B.C.

Barrie Clark (L — North Vancouver-Seymour) told the legislature Loffmark also may have damaged the ability of Mrs. Norma Rankin of Sparks, Nevada, to recover from the open heart surgery she received in Vancouver last December.

The minister discussed Mrs. Rankin's case in the legislature in February and said doctors have too much power in deciding who gets admitted to hospitals.

FRAUD IMPRESSION

Many MLAs felt at the time Loffmark left the impression Mrs. Rankin attempted to defraud the B.C. Medical Plan and the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service, though she paid her hospital bill.

Loffmark said in his budget debate speech he did not intend to recommend that any charges be laid. But he pointed out Mrs. Rankin, an American resident, underwent surgery at a time when a Surrey man, Russell McKinnon, was flown to Montreal at provincial expense for open heart surgery.

"His behavior has been an attempt to cover up his own ineptness by slandering someone who doesn't have the right to speak in this house. The minister's statements have put her to a severe test as far as her recovery is concerned."

SYSTEM WEAK

Loffmark said he brought Mrs. Rankin's case before the house to point out the weaknesses in the system of accrediting doctors for hospital privileges.

"I never suggested there was any culpable action on

CHIANG TO RUN

TAIPEI (UPI) — Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-shek, who last month expressed a desire to retire, will instead accept a draft and run for a fifth term, a Kuomintang party spokesman said today.

A nationwide movement was kicked off to draft Chiang after he announced his intention to step down in an address to the national assembly Feb. 26.

Glue Ban Rejected

Vancouver (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang has rejected a suggestion that the federal government restrict the sale of solvents used by youngsters to obtain hallucinary effects.

In reply to a letter from Vancouver city council on the issue, Lang said preventing the sale of glue, nail polish remover and bay rum to youngsters would not stop them from getting hold of the items.

"To strictly restrict their sale could be considered an injustice to the great majority of young people who use them properly in many of their day-to-day activities," the minister's reply says.

"Such prohibitions would have to be so extensive they would seriously affect the rights of the great majority of people who do not abuse the substances," said Lang.

The minister's reply will come before city council Tuesday.

Slides Claim Lives

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (UPI) — A pounding rainstorm which caused rivers to flood and tumbled rock and mud slides onto highways has claimed the lives of at least 10 persons in southern Oregon and northern California.

The heavy rains drenched the area for six days, but the weatherman forecast the showers would taper off today to give soaked residents a break from the storm.

Tons of rock and boulders crashed onto roadways wet with pouring rain and closed long stretches of the main north-south coastal highway. Some motorists met death under the cascading slides.

Rivers were near or above flood stage because of the heavy rains and melting snow. Waterfront businesses sand-bagged their buildings against the onrushing water.

Two small planes crashed in the storm. The pilot of one was killed, the other pilot survived. Two youths were electrocuted by downed power lines.

NEWS BRIEFS

Oil Deal Set?

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese finance minister was reported today to have decided on a $1-billion loan to help finance a Soviet-Japanese project to develop oil fields in Siberia.

Assassinated

BEIRUT (AP) — A former Syrian vice-premier and interior minister, Maj.-Gen. Mohammed Omran, was assassinated today in his house in the northern Lebanese city of Tripoli, police reported.

Citizens Flee

TUZIA, Yugoslavia (AP) — About 100,000 persons, fled their homes Friday night when two medium-strength earthquakes shook the industrial zone of central Yukoslavia, reports said today.

Narrow Squeeze

EDMONTON (CP) — Western region airport technicians voted by a slim margin Friday to accept a settlement offer worked out by a federal mediator. A spokesman said 54.3 per cent of the 180 technicians in the region, which includes Alberta, northeastern British Columbia, the Yukon and part of the Northwest Territories voted in favor of the proposal.

Bullring First

MADRID (UPI) — Spanish labor unrest spread to the bullring today when matadors threatened to strike unless the government cuts their taxes. There are 1,559 bullfighters registered in Spain, including 184 foreigners. If the strike materialized, it would be the first in Spanish bullfighting history.

Blast Kills 4 In Belfast Cafe

BELFAST (UPI) — A bomb exploded in a downtown Belfast restaurant crowded with shoppers having their afternoon tea today, killing at least four persons and injuring as many as 60, a British army spokesman said.

The spokesman said at least 10 of those injured in the 4:30 p.m. blast at the Abercorn Restaurant were in serious condition.

The explosion hurled glass over passersby on Castle Street in the heart of the capital's shopping district.

The spokesman said the bomb was relatively small and probably contained no more than 10 pounds of explosive. He said the toll was particularly high because it apparently went off without warning in the confined space of the restaurant.

Earlier today police surprised two gunmen planting a bomb outside a Belfast office and, in a gunbattle, shot and killed one and seriously wounded the other, a police spokesman said.

Near Londonderry, police said they found in the snow along a country road the hooded body of a man shot twice through the head.

The man aged about 30 was not identified immediately, but hooding and execution victim is a method which has been used by the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

EX-CON WINS SUIT

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—A former convict has won a $600,000 judgment for blindness he says was caused by tear-gas used during a prison disturbance.

A federal jury made the award to Artie Curtis Ussery, 27, against the Federal Laboratory Co. of Saltzeberg, Pa.

Ussery said a blast of tear-gas from a prison guard led to total blindness.

Hovercraft Flips

PORTSMOUTH, England (UPI) — A passenger-carrying hovercraft flipped over in gale-force winds near this port today, spilling several dozen persons into the icy English Channel, coast guard officials said.

A spokesman for the Isle of Wight coast guard said 26 passengers were believed to have been aboard the hovercraft and that 15 had been picked up by boats and a Royal Air Force helicopter.

Several other passengers and the pilot were trapped in the craft, the coast guard said.

Rescue boats from Portsmouth and Cowes on the Isle of Wight sped to the scene of the accident near Clarence Pier at Southsea.

Witnesses said a rush of air lifted an edge of the craft, which makes regular trips in the Solent, a channel between Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight, and flipped it over into the water.

DRAMA TEST CAUSES BUZZ

It's that time of year and once again many local schools are abuzz with preparations for the annual Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival.

Now in its 32nd year, the festival opens next Friday at Lansdowne Junior Secondary. Times drama critic Audrey Johnson checked out the activities with a photographer at a number of schools.

What they found appears today on Page 12.

Dollars Poor Yardsticks to Compare Regions

OTTAWA (CP) — Strategies for regional development must go beyond purely economic values and include subjective social values, a regional development conference was told today.

Economic indicators such as per capita income are an insufficient foundation for regional development policies, said Dr. O. J. Firestone, organizer of the three-day conference which ended today.

"Dollar figures do not reflect adequately how people feel and what they really want." Some groups, for example, might prefer leisure activities to earning overtime pay.

Measured in terms of personal income per capita, regional economic disparity changed little between the mid-1920's and the mid-1960's, he said. But social disparity lessened as the poorer regions came closer to the rich ones in terms of infant mortality rates, health services, book circulation, number of telephones and television sets, and newspaper circulation.

Some social indicators, notably the student-teacher ratio, showed more of a gap in 1969 than in 1959, but overall social disparity lessened.

DATA QUESTIONED

Dr. Firestone, an economics professor at the University of Ottawa, concluded that "regional economic disparity data and analysis do not necessarily provide a useful basis for regional economic planning and policy formulation."

"A more meaningful way may be the setting of regional targets aimed at maximizing the resources of each area, taking into account the aspirations and the will of its residents."

J. P. Francis, assistant deputy minister for planning in the federal department of regional economic expansion, agreed that planners must take social values into account.

"At the forefront of any debate over policies to achieve a greater regional balance in economic opportunities must be the difficulty in quantifying the net social benefits flowing from different strategies," he said.

"Psychic income associated with family ties and hereditary domiciles, for example, is highly subjective and people and groups with particular ideologies give it especial weight."

ADVISE CAUTION

Mr. Francis cautioned against expecting too much from planning or trying to draw up rigid, all-encompassing, long-term development programs.

"The movement towards a more rational decision-making process in regional development, as in many other fields of importance to society, is going to be difficult and long. The will, the tools and the information are still in a rudimentary state."

If a wrong approach to planning produces a more rigid and less responsive decision-making process, he said, the words of Danish poet Piet Hlen might apply:

"Our choicest plans have fallen through,
Our airiest castles tumbled over,
Because of the lines we neatly drew,
And later neatly stumbled over."

SEARCH AND WHAT?

Rescue Service Too Little, Too Late—Report

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Allegations that search and rescue facilities are too little — and often too late — in the case of marine disasters have been backed up in the findings of an official court of inquiry called for by the minister of transport.

The report bucks up those who assert that weekend standby operations of rescue aircraft are inadequate.

The 181-page report and its recommendations stems from a court of inquiry into the sinking of the fishboat Enterprise and the ferry Patrick Morris off the Atlantic coast in April 1970.

Although the locale is different the conditions surrounding the disaster bear a painful similarity to marine tragedies on this coast.

SIX-HOUR DELAY

In his findings, court commissioner His Honor Judge P. Lloyd Soper notes that it was six hours after the first "Mayday" was received by the Rescue Co-ordination centre in Halifax before planes left for the scene.

Soper faults a system which allows such a delay, even thought other vessels may be in the vicinity of ships in trouble. When the Enterprise sunk, another fishboat, the Gulf Gerd, was in the vicinity but couldn't spot survivors because of heavy seas.

The incident is parallel to one that occurred April 10, 1971, when John Donald Barber and Alexander Wilson of Vancouver drowned after their boat sank near Campbell River.

Although the disaster happened within 10 minutes of the Comox air base out of which rescue craft operate it was one hour and 15 minutes before a helicopter reached the scene. The reason — the disaster happened on a weekend and rescue craft are only fully manned during the working week.

MORE MANPOWER

In his recommendations Soper askd for "an increase in the number of personnel that will be available in shifts at search and rescue stations so that the reaction time may be reduced to a minimum on a 24-hours-a-day basis."

This is what the Campbell River council and other municipalities have been clamoring for on this coast. Their requests, to date, have resulted in no encouragement or constructive action from the minister.

In fact, one Ottawa department official wrote the Campbell River council suggesting that any increase of services was not warranted for "isolated incidents."

Soper tiso recommends that search and rescue aircraft and personnel on the Atlantic coast be relocated so that aircraft will be in a position to reach distress areas more quickly.

Here again, there is a parallel on Vancouver Island where with Victoria and Sidney being the most prolific areas for pleasure boaters, the nearest rescue aircraft are based 150 miles away at Comox.

In all such inquiries, called for under the Canada Shipping Act, the court is empowered to levy costs on owners of the vessels involved.

The Enterprise was owned by Chaleur Bay Fisheries Ltd. and the Patrick Morris, although operated and managed by the Canadian National Railway, belonged to the transport department.

Soper elected the minister of transport be assessed counsel fees of both the fishboat's owners and the CNR, because the findings of the investigation were "of public interest."

Soper states "revision is imperative" of the way in which inquires into shipping casualties are called.

Inquiries, he asserts, are limited because regulations direct that courts are asked to consider a set of questions without a general power to investigate related matters which, in their opinion, have a bearing on the matter.

"Indeed," Soper says, "the questions as presented are more suggestive of t search for a verdict, which, I am certain, the minister would not want to suggest."

RULES INADEQUATE

He points out the weakness of legislation that sets down that an inquiry be ordered by the minister of transport when the marine investigation division and other sections of this department may be involved.

Soper claims that such inquiries should be set up by the minister of justice.

The Patrick Morris sank on her way to look for survivors from the Enterprise. The inquiry round that the sinking was due to water pouring in after her stern door collapsed.

Regulations lay down minimum strength for stern doors of such vessels but do not cover the strength the fastenings should be. In the case of the Patrick Morris it was the fastenings that gave way under the pressure of the seas.

Another weakness in regulations discovered by the probe concerned the number of lifeboats required to be carried by commercial vessles.

The Patrick Morris met these regulations but a 40-degree list made it virtually impossible to lower boats from one side.

INSTRUCTION NEEDED

Soper's recommendation is that department of transport regulations be changed so that either side of a ship would carry lifeboats and liferafts sufficient for her crew and passenger capacity.

Other recommendations include:

— Skippers instruct crews in use of flares. It is often too late in emergencies to read the fine print for instructions.

— Inspection of liferafts be carried out with ship personnel present so that they become familiar with the launching routine.

JUDGE WON'T STICK IT TO 'EM

The court will not serve as a source of revenue, Judge E. F. N. Robinson declared Friday in refusing to levy a fine because an Oak Bay resident didn't have her 1972 licence plate stickers attached.

Hennie Nyhof 2,047 Kendal, was charged — along with 69 other Oak Bay residents — with not displaying valid 1972 licence plate stickers as of midnight, March 1.

She appeared in Robinson's traffic court Friday, and could have expected to pay the statuatory $25 fine for the offence.

"I'm not going to be a party to making revenue for the municipality, and I'm going to suspend sentence in this case," Robinson said.

A $25 fine is the "indicated penalty" for the charge.

Mrs. Nyhof said she had bought the 1972 stickers for her car's licence plates, but had not affixed them.

She said she had the stickers in the house, and would have put them on before driving her car anywhere from its curb-side parking spot.

Oak Bay police issued 70 tickets on parked cars for not having 1972 stickers Wednesday. Mrs. Nyhof's car was tagged shortly after noon.

If all 70 car-owners had been ordered to pay the usual $25 fine, it would have meant $1,750 for the municipality's coffers.

Triple Volley Hits Gaglardi

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Spokesmen for the Capital Regional District delivered a double broadside at Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi today for saying there is no place for regional districts in delivering welfare services.

A third shot came from the chairman of a citizens' committee which studied local social services delivery for a year and a half. He said Gaglardi missed the main points in the committee's report.

"The minister did a complete reversal whene the going got a little tough," said Saanich mayor Hugh Curtis who is chairman of the regional board.

"He can be depended upon for that sort of tactic."

Gaglardi "is blinded by a hatred of regional boards" and "shows an appalling lack of understanding" of the issue, said Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning, chairman of the regional board's health and social services committee.

ARGUMENT REJECTED

Gaglardi said Friday he does not buy the argument that welfare would be any more efficiently administered regionally than under the existing system.

Curtis said there are people within the provincial government at both elected and staff level who see the logic in regional proposals, have encouraged change and worked hard to bring it closer.

Gaglardi's latest outburst is "pure political expediency," the latest stage in a feud between Gaglardi and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

"Mr. Gaglardi is not likely to support something which Mr. Campbell is already supporting. I think if we understand that we understand the whole thing."

John Di Castri, local architect who led 10 citizen volunteers in an intensive study which produced the report, said one of the prime objectives was more efficient use of the welfare dollar.

Gaglardi appears to have missed key recommendations on how duplication and fragmentation of current services could be eliminated, he said.

Mrs. Gunning pointed out that in Greater Victoria the statutory social services program is now fragmented into four administrations — Victoria welfare, Saanich social services, the provincial government district offices and the Family and Children's Service.

It produces "an uneven and confusing pattern," she said.

"This is not only a wasteful and inefficient duplication, it is a perfect situation for buck-passing and that is just what happens — people needing help are passed around.

"In all other parts of the province except Vancouver and Victoria, the whole program is in each case under a single government agency."

'LIP SERVICE'

Mrs. Gunning said integration of the four agencies as recommended by the regional study would have permitted centralizing and streamlining of the income maintenance program.

It would have released social workers into the community to work more constructively toward prevention of problems and rehabilitation of individuals and families — "a principle to which Mr. Gaglardi pays lip service."

The regional taxpayer is carrying a crushing bill — over $18 million — for social services, said Mrs. Gunning.

Gaglardi said Friday regional boards are too powerful.

"That is the crux of the problem for him," said Mrs. Gunning.

REID (DEVELOPING)

'Answer Soon' Says the Mayor

Vancouver developer J. A. Reid wants some action from Victoria on his controversial waterfront highrise plans and Mayor Peter Pollen said today he'll get it soon.

Pollen said city aldermen plan a thorough review of the subject at a meeting Tuesday night "and we should be in a position to discuss the matter with Mr. Reid or his representatives shortly."

At issue is Reid's proposal to build highrise towers on his Wharf Street property below Bastion Square. The aesthetics and economics of the plan generated public arguments for months last year.

Reid said last November he would build a "seven-storey concrete box" on his property if his commercial-residential towers were not approved by March 1.

With the deadline past he said from Vancouver Friday: "I would like to hear from the city — and I mean soon."

Pollen's response was sweet reasonableness today.

"It's certainly not our intention to engage in any battle with Mr. Reid. Indeed, we're most anxious to accommodate him and encourage him to develop his property — in a reasonable manner, with utmost public access to the waterfront and in proper proportions."

Pollen said the city would be in touch with Reid shortly.

The True North Without Maple Sugar

TODAY WE CRACK SOME books, of which the first is a $6.50 paperback from McClelland and Stewart that can be expected to shake up the over-complacent reader.

"Making It: The Canadian Dream," has been compiled by professors Cy Gonick and Bryan Finnigan as a text for sociology students whom they would encourage "to become more open-minded, more tolerant of diversity in lifestyles, and at the same time more questioning on the conflicts within Canadian institutions."

But it deserves a wider-than-academic reading, and I recommend it to those who would know their country and its problems better.

Collaborators Gonick (economics, University of Manitoba) and Finnigan (Sociology, University of Lethbridge) contribute explanatory prefaces to a few gleanings they present. Their basic role, however, is that of cost-holders to the heated participants — and a widely-diversified crew they are.

Wilfred Pelletier, who tells of his childhood in an Indian village, sheds light on the Indian way in 10 pages which I hope will find a home in many a school.

A debate on federalism between Jean-Luc Pepin and Rene Levesque is more than a clash of Quebecois viewpoints: Two men who are well-equipped to argue their points offer their separate projections of our future.

(Pepin: "Two nations living in peace in the bosom of a single state." Levesque: To independent states living as neighbors in economic association.)

These are only a couple of samplings from a 593-page collection that rattles the ribs of our Canadian society very shrewdly indeed.

For another here's a pitch by Bruce Kidd for vacation land use which goes far beyond the buying back of such lands from American owners who have been acquiring them in job lots.

Government, Kidd suggests, should subsidize outdoor holidays on publicly-owned tracts for the Canadian who can't afford to take himself and his family to a resort or even a provincial park.

"'Quality of life' is a favorite slogan of today's politician who has finally discovered that people want more out of life than simply a 'job,'" he states. "But so far, public recreation programs have added little to the lives of those who need enrichment the most — the working poor, the unemployed, the single parents and the disabled: in short, all those with little money and less mobility. We desperately need programs that meet the leisure needs of Canadians of all ages and incomes and that use Canadian resources."

In total, I regard the Finnigan-Gonick anthology as the most challenging job of work to come my way in a long time. If you read it, I expect you'll find yourself reacting to it much as I did — which is to say disagreeing at least as often as you agree with the views presented.

Perhaps the books' chief merit is that it de-simplifies out True North Strong and Free. We've come a long way from the dear old sugar-maple grove!

One cherky booklet that I welcome each year as a sign of springtime is The Farmers' Almanac with its compendium of wit, wisdom and assorted corn.

Along with other delights, this year's issue of the 155-year-old Almanac offers a parody of "The Old Oaken Bucket" from which I'll borrow a snatch . . .

"With what anguish of mind
I remember my childhood
Recalled in the light of
knowledge since gained.
The mariarious farm, the wet, fungus-grown wild-
wood,
The chills then contracted
that since have remained;
The scum-covered duck
pond, the pigsty close by
it,
The ditch where the sour-
smelling house drainage
fell,
The damp, shaded dwelling,
the foul barnyard nigh it,
And worse than all else was
that terrible well.

And the old oaken bucket,
the mould-crusted bucket,
The moss-covered bucket
that hung in the well."

Not quite the sentimental song-poem penned by Samuel Woodworth in nostalgic mood, but the same as a finicky board of health might revamp it.

For a final book, here is Victorian Kelly Covin's "Hear That Train Blow," this time as a nicely-produced paperback from Dell Publishing Company of New York.

Hard-cover costing as it does, Covin's well researched documentary novel based on the infamous Scottsboro case should now command a much wider readership.

With two published novels to his credit, Covin is taking time out. I'm hoping that his next, when he gets around to it, will be a British Columbia background piece.

Rent Increase Upsets Tenants

Notice of a $5 a month rent increase was sent to occupants of a large Victoria apartment block, which contains many retired people, just a few days after the provincial government announced a $50 a year grant to tenants over 65.

A Victoria Silver Threads spokesman today said that some of the older occupants of Beckley Manor, 548 Dallas Road, are upset over the increase but are "afraid to protest because they might be turned out."

She added that Beckley Manor is only one of others in the James Bay area which is raising rents.

Beckley, which has about 180 suites, has rents ranging from $130 a month on the lower floors to $235 on the top

The manager, Walter Thorne, was unavailable for comment. Beckley Manor is owned by West-cott-Middlegate of North Vancouver, which also could not be reached.

Beckley: Going Up

Subsidy? Apply Monday

Persons over 65 who are eligible for the provincial government's proposed $50 grant for renters will be able to apply for the grant starting Monday.

G. S. Bryson, deputy minister of finance, said today application forms have been printed and will be available Monday. He said eligible persons can apply "anytime" after that.

Bryson also said no payments will be made until the legislature has passed the grant proposal.

OVE WITT MAY SEEK SC SEAT

Victoria alderman Ove Witt said today he is "very strongly considering" going after the Social Credit nomination for one of the two Victoria seats in the legislature.

The seats are held by Trade Minister Waldo Skillings and Public Works Minister W. N. Chant.

Witt said he has been approached by Social Credit party organizers to seek the nomination before the next provincial election, expected later this year.

"I really would like to," Witt said.

He said once he has decided to seek the nomination, he will take out a membership in the Socred party. He said he hadn't really given much consideration to the three other political parties in B.C.

Local Backing Lacking

A further amendment to the Public Schools Act, which will mean an automatic referendum for any school district wishing to spend more than the provincially-set limit, does not have the support of Greater Victoria school board chairman Allan McKinnon.

McKinnon said Friday he does not approve of the amendment because it means a school board will have to take a spending issue to the public even if it is sure taxpayers would not object to spending above the provincial limit.

Present legislation stipulates that 100 taxpayers, or five per cent of the taxpeyers, must object in writing to the extra spending before the issue goes to a vote. The situation exists now in Greater Victoria, with a referendum to be held next Saturday for $412,000 above the spending limit.

WASTE

The amendment was introduced in the legislature earlier this week by Education Minister Donald Brothers.

The amendment was called "a needless waste of taxpayers' time and money" by B.C. School Trustees' Association president Jack Smedley, who said that of 25 school districts seeking to spend above the provincial limit, only nine had the necessary number of taxpayers objecting to the expenditure, forcing a referendum.

With the new legislation, the other 16 districts would also have to hold referendums, which cost money themselves, he said.

RUNAWAY LOCOMOTIVE STOPPED BY RUNNER

LONDON (UPI) — When the engineer of locomotive 5521 returned to where he had left it in the freight yard, the big diesel was gone.

The 100-ton locomotive, whose brakes apparently had not been set, rolled quietly out of Harrogate freight yard in northern England Friday.

Gathering speed, the runaway engine careened along a downhill stretch of track through the English countryside.

Frantic railway officials telephoned warnings to stations along the way.

The locomotive raced on, reaching speeds of 60 miles per hour as it crashed through the wooden gates of one railway crossing.

On it sped. Commuters at five stations gaped as the driverless engine whizzed by.

At the disused station of Marston Moor, 12 miles down the track from the freight yard, signalman Kenneth Bristow, 43, braced for action.

The locomotive, now slowed to 20 m.p.h. by an uphill stretch, approached the station's platform. Bristow started running.

"I was pelting alongside the cab door which was slightly open," Bristow said later. "I grabbed hold of a handle, got a foothold and swung myself aboard.

"I had never been in an engine cab before," he said. "There were a lot of dials and levers. There was a catch saying 'emergency brake on', so I pulled it and gradually the thing stopped."

. . . LOFFMARK RAPPED

the part of this woman," he said.

"But that's the impression you left at the time," Clark shot back.

Later in the debate Clark rose again to say he had telephoned Mrs. Rankin to clarify some information and had learned that he was misinformed about her citizenship now.

She is in fact an American citizen, he said.

But he said Mrs. Rankin told him that she had brought the cash with her to pay for her operation in advance when she came to British Columbia.

"Obviously there was no intention to defraud," he said.

Clark also stated that Mrs. Rankin's husband was resident in B.C. from January 1971, and had applied, properly, for a medicare card and received one for himself, and for his wife, which he hadn't applied for.

He said Loffmark's speech "was the most unfair act by a cabinet minister this session," and he added the minister implied she came to B.C. for her operation because she could not afford it in the U.S.

Clark said Mrs. Rankin's doctor told her last summer she needed another operation and gave his professional advice that the Vancouver surgeon who had done her previous operations perform the fourth one.

The Liberal MLA said he is advised that Mrs. Rankin was told by the B.C. Medical Plan she was eligible for coverage.

If there was any attempt to misrepresent the truth in her application, Clark said — and he added he did not believe there was — Loffmark should recommend charges be laid on the basis of facts.

Otherwise, he said, everybody has to believe Mrs. Rankin is innocent of any wrongdoing. But the result of Loffmark's speech, Clark said, has been anonymous letters to the woman and the damaging of her reputation in B.C. and Nevada.

'DROP DEAD'

Clark read part of one letter he said Mrs. Rankin had received following Loffmark's speech in which the writer said he hoped she died soon.

The letter was signed "drop dead," Clark said.

Mrs. Rankin's husband has threatened to sue Loffmark if he ever repeats outside the legislature what he said about his wife inside it, Clark said.

He challenged the minister to go outside the house and repeat his statements.

"The least this minister can do is publicly apologize to this woman who he pilloried. That woman is innocent unless the minister has facts to prove she's guilty and if he has facts he should lay charges."

RID OF B.C.

Clark said that in the light of Mrs. Rankin's wish to be "rid of British Columbia" and the memories of her treatment by Loffmark he would no longer raise the issue.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said he regretted Loffmark had brought "petty parochialism" into the issue of health services.

AT 100, STILL HUNTS FOR GOLD

ATLIN, B.C. (CP) — Dick Craft gave up riding his bicyce at 98.

At his 100th birthday party Friday night, he announced he has just taken out a five-year renewal of his driver's licence.

And as soon as the weather clears up in the remote mining community in the northwest corner of British Columbia, he says he'll be out in his old pickup truck again, hunting for gold.

A heavy-set man, Craft hasn't lost his sense of humor over the years.

Asked if his teeth were real, he replied:

"I couldn't find any in the second-hand store, so I haven't bought any yet."

He lives alone in a small log cabin in the middle of town. His wife, whom he met when he was police chief in Timmins, Ont. in the early 1900s, died in 1952.

To keep himself busy, Craft converted his front porch into a small variety store 12 years ago. He spends most of the day dishing out candy and soda pop to passing children.

"I don't make any money at it," he explained. "In fact, I guess you could say I lost on it, but it gives me something to do."

Time's Ad Queried

School Curbs Bring Battle of Graphs

The current issue of Time Magazine containing advertisements for liquor, cigarettes and Premier Bennett's budget speech was brandished in the legislature Friday by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

Barrett asked whether this apparent switch of policy toward publications that violate provincial advertising bans was in fact a decision to "reward" Evergreen Press which publishes Time in B.C.

He noted the company has been considered close to the Social Credit government in the past.

Barrett was interrupted by supply committee chairman Herb Bruch who said the advertising ban was not under Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's estimates which were under debate Friday.

Barrett said he wanted to know if Loffmark approved of the budget advertisement in Time Magazine.

Neither Loffmark nor Premier Bennett made any comment.

The ad, said Liberal Leader Pat McGeer, "shows the absurb double standard we have sunk to in B.C.

"The attorneey-general says he refuses to reward the Victoria Colonist and Victoria Times because they broke the tobacco ad ban, but he will reward Time Magazine by placing a national ad for B.C.'s budget."

What can only be called "The Battle of the Graphs" has sprung out of the current struggle between B.C. school boards and the provincial government over spending limits.

The opening shot in the graph war was fired by the government and today the fire was returned by the newly-organized School District 61 (Greater Victoria) Parents Association.

The parents' group which organized in opposition to the government's proposed limits on school board spending and teachers' salaries, has drawn up a graph which shows that, according to spending figures extended from 1960 into the future, the government's contribution to elementary and secondary school education will in the year 1990 be a mere two per cent of the total provincial budget.

GOVERNMENT GRAPH

The graph was drawn up after the parents' group received from Education Minister Donald Brothers a government graph drawn up much the same way.

The government graph appears to show that, according to spending figures extended from 1960 into the future, the share of the budget taken up by education, health and social services will by the year 1980 take up the entire provincial budget.

Parents Association spokesman Dr. George Stocker said the parents' graph is, of course, an extension of "farcical reasoning."

"We know it doesn't work," he said, "But it is still the same type of graph as they have produced."

WELCOME IT

"Using the Honorable Minister's own methods we have arrived at the conclusion that elementary and secondary education will only cost the provincial government two per cent of its budget by 1990," Stocker said. "We have been given to believe that Mr. Brothers would welcome this state of affairs."

The parents' graph shows spending on lower education declining from a 1960 "high" of about 23 per cent of the total budget to a 1972 figure of about 19 per cent.

From there, the graph takes a sharper downward slope, taking into account proposed government cutbacks on school board spending.

ZERO IN 1994

The graph shows lower education spending to take up 12 per cent of the total budget in 1980 and less than eight per cent in 1985. By the year 1994, the government would be contributing nothing at all toward lower education spending.

The government graph has bold letters emblazoned across the top of the page: Can We Let This Happen! It projects total government revenues increasing by 10 per cent per year and spending on education, health and social services increasing at 15 per cent per year.

The two lines intersect at about 1980, with the total expenditure (all going to education, health and social services, of course) amounting to about $2.8 billion.

19 PERCENT

This year, the total budget is estimated at $1.5 billion, with estimated spending on elementary and secondary education about $286 million. This figure represents about 19 per cent of the total budget, as the parents' graph shows.

However, the government graph includes post-secondary education spending as well as health and social services in its projection of costs.

Education costs, including post-secondary, take up 31 per cent of the total budget and health and social services take up a further 38 per cent of the total, according to figures in Premier Bennett's budget speech. These chunks are both increased by 15 per cent per year to get to the 1980 intersecting line.

Stocker said the government graph is rendered even more inaccurate by including the costs for health and social services. It is the necessity for spending a proper proportion of total revenue on lower education his parents' group is pushing.

"When some of the people in our group who are familiar with accounting saw their graph, they just shook their heads," Stocker said.

weeks ago to test its constitutionality in court.

The question of the court challenge arise shortly after Prime Minister Trudeau called Mr. Bennett a bigot who thought there were too many French-Canadians in Ottawa.

SAYS IT'S A LAUGH

Mr. Howard said the question of the court challenge has disappeared "in the laughter of constitutional experts."

"If politicians in British Columbia oppose equalization grants only, then why do they always use Quebec as an illustration? . . ." he asked.

"After all, Quebec with grants of $74 per capita is the second lowest of all the receiving provinces.

"If there is any complaint why not talk about Newfoundland, with $213 per capita, or New Brunswick . . . with $164 per cipta?"

Mr. Howard said he could only assume that these politicians thought that it was wrong to have equalization grants for French-speaking provinces but it was all right for English-speaking provinces.

CALLED 'UNFAIR'

Mr. St. Pierre called the accusations that Quebec is getting more than its fair share "divisive, unfair, damaging."

Quebec's per-capita share of regional expansion grants was $14.93, compared to $32.60 for Nova Scotia, $29.78 for New Brunswick, and $16.40 for the comparatively wealthy province of Alberta.
